Refugees tell new tales of pillage in Zaire war

Jose Lopez/Times-News

Well, almost any . . .

PHOTOGRAPHERS will go to any length to get a picture of a gradute, particularly if it is their child. Larry Tommerup, right, stretched out on his back while photographing his daughter, Laurie, following baccalaureate services at Twin Falls High School Sunday. Laurie, along with 407 other seniors, will be graduating at 8 p.m. today in the school gymnasium.

PARIS (UPI) — Hundreds of white survivors from the war in Zaire flooded refugee centers in France and Belgium today, relating stories of pillage and massacre by rebels high on drugs and Zairean government troops alike.

"The rebels came at four in the morning," Mrs. Daniel Nortier said. "We heard shots. The rebels were kids, just 13 and 14, like my boys," gesturing to her two sons.

Mrs. Nortier's family were among 86 French nationals who arrived in Paris today, rescued by French paratroopers from rebels who invaded Zaire's southern Shaba province almost two weeks ago.

Her voice rose and she talked faster.

"They threw grenades into houses of whites. I saw people dead on the sidewalk with bayonets sticking out of their stomachs."

She broke into sobs and started babbling. Red Cross nurses put her into a wheelchair and held her hands. "I am afraid ... I am afraid," she gasped. Then she screamed.

In Zaire, French paratroops seeking to free whites still held by rebel forces in Zaire's Shaba Province battled insurgents today on the outskirts of the copper-mining city of Kolwezi.

French and Belgian army officers estimated that 150 whites were slain by the rebels who are believed to have taken another 60 whites with them as hostages in their retreat.

A French government spokesman in Paris confirmed that the center of Kolwezi was "firmly in French hands" but said foreign legionnaires are encountering pockets of resistance within a 6-mile radius.

The French defense ministry put casualties of the 600-man Foreign Legion force at two dead and 14 wounded. Ten of the wounded have been evacuated to France, the ministry said. It said several legionnaires earlier reported missing have all been found.

The ministry said that 250 rebels have been killed and that Soviet weapons have been recovered.

GRIEF ETCHES FACE OF KOLWEZI SURVIVOR
... she was among first to reach Brussels and safety

"Our forces' action continues," spokesman Pierre Hunt told reporters in Paris. "They are in action to liberate remaining Europeans still in rebel hands."

He said he had no information on reports from the battle zone that the insurgents were regrouping and forming columns in an effort to roll back towards Kolwezi.

The French defense ministry reported that a French Air Force Transall transport plane was attacked with light weapons "without result" as it took off from Kolwezi Airport Sunday.

French paratroops cleaned up the last pocket of resistance in the city center Saturday night when they stormed a metal-working factory where 200 rebels were holed up.

In Brussels, three other planes arrived from Kinshasa late Sunday, carrying 560 refugees from the mineral-rich region. In all, some 2,500 whites were evacuated from the war-torn province.

Many told UPI reporter Michael Dennigan of anti-white savagery by both the invading rebels and the Zairean government troops supposedly defending the town.

Some feared the government troops more than the rebels, said Nelly van Hevel, wife of a Belgian schoolteacher.

She said Kolwezi refugees were saying that government troops high on marijuana — not the rebels — massacred 34 whites in one house.

Almost all told of rebels coming to their homes again and again, stealing everything at gunpoint. They often preferred to shoot their way in and, refugees said, their looting techniques were copied by government soldiers and the local civilian population.

"The rebels went into Motoshi hospital and knifed every patient, black or white," Jean-Marie Lallemand, 31, said in Paris. "I saw 40 dead whites heaped in one spot, 25 bodies in a house, a guy who fell dead against a wall.

"I saw entire families shot and dogs eating them. When I saw those kids dead."

Tears filled his blue eyes and his voice cracked.

"They held peoples' courts to try white people. They looted five stores near my home and killed the European owners. Some of my pals were taken hostage back to Angola. They came to my house and asked for my watch. I gave it to them — if you didn't give things you were shot."

Several Belgian refugees said the rebels launched an orgy of killing upon learning on the radio that French paratroops were being sent to restore order.

But refugees in Paris reacted with indignation at the Belgian reports. "The French Communists say that. It's not true," said Jean Louis Dachaud. "Our paratroops did their duty."

TV protest planned Tuesday

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Howard Beale, the ficticious network news anchorman in the movie Network, got people so stirred up about television he had them screaming out their windows: "I'm mad as hell, and I'm not going to take it anymore!"

Tuesday, a silent version of Beale's outrage will take place when a nationwide boycott of television.

Alarmed by what they see as an ever-increasing amount of pornography, immorality and violence on the TV screens of America, the boycotters are staging the boycott in protest.

In Twin Falls, Robert and Diane King say they and their four children will join the boycott.

"We are very concerned about the amount of violence and sex on TV," King said this morning, "and we can't seem to be able to find ways to express the dislike for it ourselves. By joining a nationwide boycott, it might be the way of voicing our objections to things shown on TV."

The King family is participating in the boycott in response to a request from President Spencer Kimball and the top leaders of the Mormon Church asking the church's 4 million members not to turn on their TV sets Tuesday.

King cited one TV program show in particular, "The 'Saturday Night Live' show is almost pornographic. It seems like the trend this coming year is a lot of shows have a lot of sexual implications," King said. "Last season there was an awful lot of violence on TV. There have been good things, too, but we do object to a lot of things shown on TV . . . our children object to them, too."

Jose Lopez/Times-News

ROBERT, DIANE KING OF TWIN FALLS IGNORE TV SET
... many others may be turned off for Tuesday boycott

Similar comments are made by another Twin Falls resident, LaVella Pace. Mrs. Pace said she and her husband, Dee, have watched more television in the last year because she has been sick. She said some daytime soap operas include "things we've been unhappy about."

Pace said there have been so many scenes of murders, lying and cheating that if children "didn't know how to do it, they are given pretty good examples . . . life is too beautiful to mar it with that junk."

The television boycott is being coordinated by Morality in Media Inc., a non-profit organization in New York City. Evelyn Dukovic, executive director of the group, said she expects several million people to participate.

Dukovic said other church groups joining Tuesday's television blackout include the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America and a number of Roman Catholic Diocese around the United States.

She said there has been no reaction from ABC, CBS or NBC so far. While Dukovic didn't know what kind of coverage the network news programs will give the protest, she said "it certainly is going to have a lot of radio coverage."

Carter sees key TVA role

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — President Carter called today for an expanded role for TVA and urged the giant federal utility to lead the way in putting a lid on inflationary rate hikes.

Carter, arriving from Plains, Ga., addressed some 2,500 TVA workers at the Knoxville Civic Center and told them TVA's history represents "a fine pattern for change which has benefitted the whole nation."

Carter said inflation is the nation's "No. 1 economic problem" and said the TVA should set an example for holding back rate increases.

"While I realize that TVA must pay its increasing bills for fuel, labor, and materials ... that is all the more reason to redouble your efforts to combat inflation," the president said.

Carter praised what he called "the hard line" TVA's board of directors took earlier this month when it reduced the size of a rate increase to customers. Instead of approving a 12 percent boost, the board authorized an 8.5 percent increase, a move endorsed by the White House.

In recent years the TVA has had substantial increases in rates. Since 1967, charges to its 6 million customers have gone up nearly 300 percent.

The president pledged his support for TVA and told workers he wanted "your help in the expanded role I see for TVA in the years ahead." He did not mention how the task of the TVA would be expanded but mentioned such general areas as pollution control and new jobs.

Surprise

LITTLETON, Colo. (UPI) — Some of the gentlemen callers directed by a massage parlor advertisement to 5504 S. Prince St. have been embarrassed to find themselves in a newspaper office.

The Littleton Sentinel and the Arapahoe Sun Sentinel moved into their new quarters last week.

A woman employed by the massage parlor, which moved to a new location up the street, told a Sentinel reporter recently: "I hope you make as much money out of that joint as I did."

Berkowitz goes on rampage in courtroom

NEW YORK (UPI) — Screaming that his last victim was a "whore," confessed "Son of Sam" murderer David Berkowitz went berserk in State Supreme Court today, biting and scratching three court officers and refusing to appear for sentencing for the six .44-caliber killings.

"Stacy is a whore. Stacy is a whore," Berkowitz shouted in a sing-song voice as he was led to the defense table, his eyes rolling and his face flushed. "That's right, that's right. I'd kill them all again."

Four guards grabbed Berkowitz as Neysa Moskowitz, mother of 20-year-old Stacy, jumped from her seat and screamed at Berkowitz, "You animal!"

Robert Violante, who had an eye shot out by the killer when Miss Moskowitz was slain, also was on his feet, shouting, "I'll kill you, you creep!"

Violante then fell back to his seat, put his face in his arms and burst into tears. His father put his arm around him, trying to comfort him.

In the scuffle that followed, Berkowitz bit and scratched several court officers, sending two to the hospital for treatment of their injuries.

The three presiding Supreme Court justices who were to have sentenced Berkowitz today delayed sentencing until June 12 and ordered the defendant to undergo another psychiatric examination.

Following the outburst, Justice Joseph Corso of Brooklyn adjourned the proceedings until June 12, but noted that the courtroom outburst could have been anticipated and might have been planned by the 24-year-old postal worker all along.

Corso said he wanted to read two paragraphs from a report of a psychiatric examination of Berkowitz that he received on May 18 from Dr. Daniel Schwartz, head of Forensic Medicine at Kings County Hospital.

"When asked what he (Berkowitz) thinks will happen in court," Corso read, "His mind changes once again. Now his face lights up and his eyes twinkle as he replies, 'I know, but I'm not telling.'"

Corso said Schwartz then asked, "Is that something Judge Corso and I don't know? And the defendant answers, 'That's right.'"

As Corso adjourned the court session, Daniel Carrique, a friend of the Moskowitz family, stood up and shouted, "No meantime! How about the 13 families? Be human!"

Applause broke out and court officers tried to lead Carrique from the room. "Don't touch me. I'll leave on my own," said Carrique as Violante, one of the seven surviving "Son of Sam" victims, once again left his seat, this time to thank Carrique.

An angry Corso said he would "not be influenced by public clamor."

The only district attorney to protest the adjournment was Mario Merola of the Bronx, who said he could not see what another psychiatric report would accomplish.

He said, "We knew in advance what would happen here," Merola said. "What took place here today is not unusual in Bronx County." Then, noting the defendant would have the right of appeal, he added, "As defender of the people of Bronx County, I object (to the adjournment)."

If he is eventually sentenced for the six murders, the pale Army veteran who will be 25 in 10 days could become eligible for parole in 25 years if he is sentenced concurrently. If the sentences are to be served consecutively, Berkowitz could come up for parole in 30 years.

On April 24, Corso found Berkowitz competent to stand trial following a closed hearing.

Tuition tax credits top heavy House debate calendar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — College tuition tax credits highlight a crowded congressional calendar this week in advance of a long weekend for the Memorial Day holiday.

A bill to provide the country's first tuition tax credits — up to $250 a year per college student — reaches the House floor at midweek, with a fight expected over attempts to include credits for tuition at private elementary and secondary schools as well.

In addition, a long-awaited compromise on natural gas pricing legislation may finally win approval from a House-Senate conference committee this week, and both a $37.9 billion Defense Department authorization and a military construction authorization bill were scheduled for House debate this week, as was a bill to grant trade concessions to Hungary.

With Congress moving toward its Memorial Day weekend holiday, the House crammed as much legislation as possible into a four-day work week while the Senate continued its filibuster over labor law revision.

No attempt is scheduled until after the recess to invoke cloture and stop the Senate debate on the labor bill, which would ease the process of labor organizing and provide penalties for employers who use anti-union tactics.

The mere fact that the tuition tax-credit has reached the House floor is a victory culminating years of work by its advocates.

The Senate has voted tax credits in the past, but despite the growing popularity of the idea, it has never received full House consideration.

President Carter opposes tuition tax credits in favor of expanding current direct education grant programs. Key House members, including many on the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, also have opposed tax credit because of their cost.

Under the bill to be debated Wednesday, a parent could subtract, direct from taxes owed, 25 percent of the cost of college tuition in a year, up to a maximum tax saving of $100 in 1978 (after August), $150 in 1979 and $250 in 1980.

Advocates say that despite its cost — $700 million by fiscal 1980 — hard-pressed middle class parents badly need the tax relief.

A lively floor fight is expected to include debate over extending the credit to cover private elementary and secondary school expenses as well, mainly to help parochial and other church schools.

Outside the House and Senate chambers, compromise appeared to be finally in sight on the key roadblock to energy legislation.

Three congressmen disclosed Friday they had cleared up their differences on a side issue of gas pricing. That seemed to cement a 13-12 majority among House conferees for a natural gas plan phasing out federal price controls by 1985.

The leadership of a House-Senate energy conference committee called a Tuesday session for a formal, public vote on the proposal. If the full conference adopts the plan, it could be a big step toward completing action on Carter's energy policy proposals.

Church roof collapses, kills girl

GARLAND, Texas (UPI) — For members of the Walnut Village Church of Christ, Sunday's incident seemed unreal — something out of a disaster movie — and it left many of them in shock.

During services, the roof of the church collapsed under the weight of tons of rain water. A 9-year-old girl was killed and 57 members of the congregation were injured. Three policemen also were hurt while trying to rescue people from debris.

"This is the worst thing I've ever seen in Garland. I just can't believe it happened on a Sunday," ambulance driver Cecil Williams said.

"It couldn't have happened at a worse time," said the elder delivering the prayer, Lay Minister E.L. Griffin. "Why couldn't it have happened last night? Or later?"

Griffin was at the church podium, and worshippers had bowed in reverence, when the roof cracked lengthwise in the middle and fell across two-thirds of the congregation of 175 people.

The worshippers began screaming, grasping frantically to pull those around them out from under the debris and 8 to 10 inches of water. They ran from the building but within minutes, the southwest corner of the roof fell, striking more people and crushing and splintering pews.

Buford Rose, 43, was one of the first to reach the scene. The owner of a nearby service station, Rose said a hysterical woman ran up to him about 11 a.m., screaming "the church fell in!"

Rose and two customers who rushed to the church said water up to 10 inches deep was flowing from the structure. He said bloodied people began running out, calling out for friends and relatives.

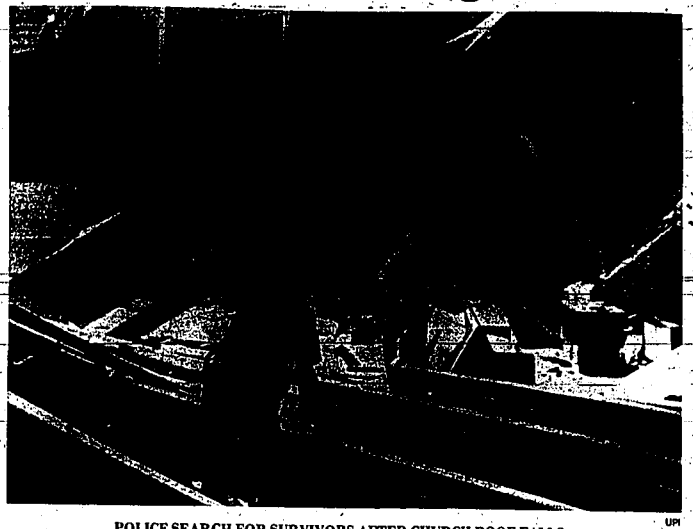

"We carried one lady out," Rose said. "Her leg had been cut plumb off. Some had broken backs and bones. Everyone was covered with blood."

Authorities said Shannon Smith died of head injuries. The girl's father, James Terry Smith, 31, was treated for minor injuries and released.

Rose said Smith ran through the rubble, looking for his daughter. He had to be pulled from the church because authorities feared more of the roof would cave in.

Much of the building's interior was reduced to rubble after the collapse. A crane lifted the two main sections of the roof and firemen quickly determined no one had been trapped inside, contrary to initial reports.

Heavy beams leaned on the expensive pews of rich wood, upholstered in orange fabric. The rain and roofing material had soaked the carpeting a dark, muddy color. Debris was several feet deep in parts of the sanctuary.

Puerto Rican terror group sets off bombs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Small bombs exploded today at New York's Kennedy Airport, Newark International Airport and outside the Justice Department building in Washington.

A Puerto Rican terrorist organization, FALN, claimed responsibility for the explosions.

No one was injured in the blasts.

A telephone call was received at UPI's New York headquarters at 10:15 a.m. from a woman identifying herself as a member of FALN, a group demanding independence for Puerto Rico.

"This is FALN," the caller said. "Listen carefully. We take full responsibility for actions in Newark, New York, Chicago and Washington and corresponding airports today...."

A spokesman for the Arson-Explosion Squad in New York said a small incendiary device exploded in the smoke shop at the Eastern Airline Terminal at Kennedy Airport about 10:45 a.m. The fire was quickly extinguished and no one was hurt.

At Newark International Airport, a similar bomb was reported to have gone off about 11 a.m.

Passengers fly out of Narita

NARITA, Japan (UPI) — The first passenger flight took off today from the new $2.6 billion Tokyo International Airport where demonstrators stormed the front gate, hurled firebombs and tried to disrupt air traffic over the weekend.

The Japan Airlines DC-8 took off from the besieged airfield with 111 passengers including 30 honeymooning couples bound for Guam and Saipan.

More flights were scheduled today, but none of the international airlines now using the congested Haneda airport in downtown Tokyo will use Narita until Tuesday.

Nearly 13,000 riot police, brought in from all parts of Japan, were on guard at the airport 41 miles north of Tokyo.

Today was quiet in contrast to Saturday and Sunday, when demonstrators hurled firebombs at police, tried to break through the main gate, felled a steel tower carrying power lines and set automobile tires on fire.

Police brought down a big balloon sent aloft near the airport by demonstrators in an apparent attempt to obstruct flights in the manner of barrage balloons employed by the British against the Nazis in the 1940 aerial Battle of Britain.

Some newlywed couples who left on the first scheduled passenger flight from Narita spent Sunday night in hotels in the airport area, rather than traveling this morning from Tokyo.

The new airport is so far from Tokyo that it takes from one hour and 10 minutes to three hours to get there from the capital.

Protestors earlier predicted that they would carry out "unlimited guerrillas warfare" to press the Japanese government to close the newly opened airport.

Because of their threats of violence, the government said 13,000 riot police would be kept around the airport for at least the rest of the month.

The airport is barred to all visitors and only departing passengers and authorized people are allowed to come through checkpoints set up by police.

The sprawling airport is surrounded by high double-wire fences.

Plains soaked

By United Press International

Thunderstorms drenched parts of the Plains from far West Texas through northeastern North Dakota today, causing scattered flash flood warnings.

Hail up to 1¾ inch in diameter pummeled part of Amarillo, Tex., late Sunday. Heavy rains caused water to stand in low areas along some poorly drained highways in Louisiana.

The intensity of the Plains' storms decreased during the night and the National Weather Service canceled most flash flood warnings. But storm activity in the Rockies intensified and the NWS said more rains could hit the Plains later today.

Fair to partly cloudy skies dominated most of the rest of the nation. Unseasonably chilly temperatures prevailed in the Great Lakes region. Readings dipped into the 30s in Chicago during the night.

The heaviest rains during the night were .98 inch at Amarillo, .70 at Akron, Ohio, .47 at Key West, Fla., and .44 at Devil's Lake, N.D.

Gromyko on way

MOSCOW (UPI) — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko left for New York today to lead the Soviet delegation in a special session of the U.N. General Assembly on disarmament, the official Tass news agency said.

Gromyko is scheduled to address the session Friday.

The Soviet foreign minister also will meet with President Carter in Washington for talks on the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty believed to be nearing completion.

TV boycott set Tuesday

Dukovic said they will have to see how effective this first boycott is before deciding on whether to stage others. "But from the way the mail is going, people have been waiting for something like this — for a way to talk back to TV."

Milo Price, who handles public communications for the Mormon Church in Twin Falls, said the leadership's call to boycott was announced from church pulpits Sunday. He said it is the first time Mormon Church President Kimball has asked church members to voluntarily participate in a television boycott.

Youth killed

LA GRANDE, Ore. (UPI) — One teenage boy was killed and his companion was knocked unconscious by lightning Sunday afternoon.

State police said Brian Daniel Bennett, 17, and Philip Lloyd Hunter, 15, both of La Grande, were standing under a pine tree fishing from the bank of Morgan Lake in mountains three miles west of La Grande when a rain and lightning storm moved into the area.

Transfer sought

BOISE (UPI) — Convicted murderer Thomas Creech said in a writ filed last week his life is in danger at the Idaho State Prison.

Creech made the charges in a writ of habeous corpus filed in Fourth District Court. He is seeking to be transferred from the Idaho State Penitentiary to the Ada County jail.

He said the action was taken because he claims his life is in danger at the prison. He also is dissatisfied with rehabilitation programs at the institution.

In the handwritten habeas corpus writ, filed last week, Creech said prison officials threatened him with harm if he made trouble for them in court. Deputy Warden L.D. Smith called the charges foolish.

Warden Richard Anderson said today Creech has been seeking the move for some time and that "He basically just wants to get out."

"He has been fussing about it for a long, long time, trying to be moved."

Two Idahoans die in Sunday wrecks

By United Press International

Two more persons died over the weekend from Idaho traffic accidents, another was critically hurt and two others remained in critical condition from previous wrecks.

Latest to die were Donald Robert Finch, 67, Boise, and Timothy P. Crusilla, 17, Coeur d'Alene.

Andrew Davis, 12, Boise, was critically hurt when the motorcycle he was riding went into the New York Canal near Five Mile Road when he tried to climb an embankment. Attendants at St. Alphonsus Hospital said his condition was serious this morning but that he was "improving rapidly."

Meantime, James Barlow, 43, Weiser, and Kerry Dominick, 16, remained in critical condition at St. Alphonsus Hospital from accidents Friday. Barlow was hurt when a pickup truck went out of control and he was thrown from the cab. Miss Dominick was hurt when her bicycle and a dump truck collided at a Garden City intersection.

Finch was killed when the pickup truck in which he was riding careened off a dirt road and plunged 300 feet down an embankment into Anderson Ranch reservoir west of Mountain Home Sunday.

Gene Allen Finch, 27, the driver, and Jim Finch, 35, a passenger, both from Boise, survived the accident with minor injuries. All three men were thrown from the truck.

Crusilla apparently lost control of a motorcycle Sunday afternoon and hit a tree on Upper Dike Road near North Idaho College at Coeur d'Alene.

Setting Amtrak record straight

TWIN FALLS — For the past few years I have taken my vacations in Oregon, spending at least part of my time in Portland. While there I make it a point to catch the act of Michael Faubion. Faubion, a former Idahoan and long time friend, makes his living singing country and western songs in bars and nightclubs on the west coast.

DAVID MORRISSEY

Faubion wrote most of the numbers he performs, and they tell of people and events from western life. One that remains in my mind is "Portland Rose," a ballad of the crack Union Pacific liner and the passengers it carried from Seattle to Portland and through Idaho to points east. I sometimes think of Faubion's words when I hear a train pass by.

I thought of Faubion's song just recently, after reading comments by Transportation Secretary Brock Adams. The secretary proposed a drastic cut in the nation's rail passenger service, a cut which would eliminate the Amtrak Pioneer Line. That route connects many of the cities once served by the Portland Rose.

Perhaps it was just a coincidence, but Adams proposed his cutback — almost to the day — seven years after the Portland Rose made its last run.

Brock said the Amtrak routes were expensive, and running in the red.

He was right.

What he didn't say was that with a few exceptions, rail passenger service has always been a losing proposition. In most railroads, profit has come not from passengers but from freight shipments — and enormous government land grants.

During the mid and late 1800s, railroads expanding in the west usually received between 10 and 40 sections of free land for each mile of track constructed. A section is one square mile of land.

That land, plus charges for freight, kept railroads in profit. The attitude of many early railroaders to passenger service was succinctly voiced by Great Northern Railroad President James J. Hill. "A passenger train," Hill declared, "is like the male teat, neither useful nor ornamental."

So Secretary Adams is right in charging passenger trains with failing to pay their own way. That's half the story, and a very important half. But in failing to tell the other half the transportation secretary is misleading the public. So serious is his omission of part of the facts the question of whether he is an impartial Secretary concerned first with the welfare of the nation can legitimately be raised.

Passenger trains don't pay their way. But neither do airlines or the bus industry or the trucking services. A survey taken a few years back revealed that in the last 55 years government (state, local and federal) has provided $457 billion for construction and maintenance of the nation's streets and highways. Roughly $300 billion of this was covered by highway user taxes and toll revenues while most of the rest came from general fund revenues.

While the trucking and busing industries paid their share of taxes, a large chunk of the funds came from taxpayers. That's as much a subsidy as Brock now claims Amtrak lines are receiving.

Then there's the expense of the interstate system. If that network were built to withstand only the weights and stresses of private automobiles — and not the significantly heavier weights of buses and trucks — the cost of the system would be greatly reduced. Again, a subsidy.

With airlines, the story is much the same. Federal, state and local taxes help insure the survival of a system many need.

Brock also failed to point out the unique advantages of a rail mass transportation system, advantages particularly valuable during an energy crisis.

- The fuel mileage of an average American train is just over one-third of a gallon per passenger for each 100 miles. That mileage ratio is 12 times that of an automobile, 15 times that of an airplane and twice that of most buses.
- A single set of railroad tracks can carry over 40,000 persons an hour. A six-lane highway can carry only 9,000 persons an hour, and a single-lane highway tops out at just over 2,000 persons an hour.
- Traveling by rail is 1 ½ times as safe as by bus, 2 ½ times as safe as by plane and 23 times as safe as by private automobile

Brock didn't mention any of those facts, and I suspect it is because he is uncomfortably close to the lobbies that would profit by scrapping rail passenger service.

It's time the transportation secretary remembered he holds his job to serve all citizens of the nation, not just a few. Railroads, bus lines and airlines all have their claims to fame, and all are needed if America is to have a balanced transportation system which can adequately deal with the many and diverse problems of passenger service. No one part of that system should be cannibalized for the sake of the other parts.

That's what should be said, but I'm not sure Brock will say it. So far it appears he's destined to make the Pioneer what the Portland Rose became a few years back — nothing but a subject for songwriters who somehow realize we have lost something irreplaceable.

Her eyes were bright as diamonds, they sparkled in the rain,
As I met her in the evening getting off the West-bound train.
The desert air around her, the midnight vapor glows,
Never thought I'd be so glad to see the Portland Rose.
The Portland Rose is rolling, headlight shining bright,
Roaring proud and mighty, sure a pretty sight.
From Omaha, Nebraska, across the mountains to the coast,
Bringing home my one and only, my little Portland Rose.
Her ruby lips are parted, in a soft expectant smile,
As she's riding through the gorge towns, sweeping past the miles.
Through the emerald throated valley where the cool Willamette flows,
Winding through the farmlands to meet the Portland Rose.
When I get sad and lonely, and the empty depot talks,
With the intermittent echoes, people waiting for their stops.
I dream I hear her voice and the rustle of her clothes,
Station master calling, all aboard the Portland Rose.
—Michael Faubion, 1976.

This time, the girls were track standouts

Some proud high school athletes walk the halls of Twin Falls, Jerome and Filer high schools today.

And some of them are wearing dresses.

At the Idaho high school track and field championships in Boise this weekend, the Jerome and Twin Falls girls track teams came away with the state championship trophies.

The Filer girls took second in the A-3 division.

The Twin Falls girls literally ran away with the state track title, largely on the pegs of senior Brenda Falash, one of the top women athletes ever to compete in Idaho.

Brenda won the mile and half-mile runs at the state women's track championships.

Diana Dolezal, a state champion in the hurdles, joined with Falash and runners Susan Sweet and Barbara McGinnis to power the Bruin girls to a pair of first places in the relay events.

Jerome's winning girls rode on the swift feet of sprinter Andrea Cannedy and the strong arm of shotputter Karen Schelling.

Filer's girls team might have won a state championship of their own if one of their stars, shotput and discus standout Lisa Hoke, hadn't been killed in a car wreck just six days before the state trackmeet.

Other Magic Valley athletes performed well in Boise, particularly the Buhl boys team that won a state title and the Twin Falls boys who came in third.

But this year, the women athletes ran most of the great races and turned in the best individual performances at the state trackmeet.

They merit an extra moment of glory in the winner's circle before school ends.

A trivial side of inflation

Like trying to nail Jello to a wall, pinning down the effects of inflation isn't easy.

All of us know prices have gone up on almost everything, but few can pinpoint exactly what things used to cost compared to what they do cost today.

The investment firm of Loeb Rhoades, Hornblower & Co. every few years publishes what they call a a "trivia index" showing how the prices of what most people consider inconsequential items rise in cost like helium-filled balloons.

The Loeb Rhoades, Hornblower trivia index shows how little a penny, a nickel, or even a quarter will buy these days.

Since 1974, for example, a package of chewing gum has doubled in price, from 10 cents to 20 cents.

Postage stamps were 8 cents in 1974, but will soon cost 15 cents.

A tin of 100 bandaids cost an average of $1.09 four years ago but cost $2 today.

A newsstand copy of Time magazine could be purchased for 50 cents in 1974 but costs $1 on a newsrack in 1978.

A 36-roll exposure roll of color film has gone from $4 to over $5 in the last few years.

And when was the last time you saw a penny arcade or a weigh-yourself scale in a drugstore that used anything less than a dime?

These small items add up to one big problem, the major problem of our day, how to cope with inflation.

ADVENTURES IN AVIATION — PART ONE

Warplanes to say we like you

©1978 N.Y. Times Service

— NEW YORK — Soon we shall send Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia some dangerous warplanes.

The purpose is to show them we like them all.

Don't ask why we couldn't have got the message across by sending them flowers and candy. Maybe in Middle East culture sending flowers and candy is a gesture of contempt.

Maybe the president and Congress thought it would make them look silly if they argued for weeks about whether to send flowers and candy. I don't know.

What I do know from studying the newspapers is that Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia all got the impression, more or less simultaneously, that we didn't like them any more.

You know what that means. It always means the same thing when somebody you like a lot says, "You don't like me any more."

It means the next thing you will hear is, "Well, if you really liked me, you'd find some way to show it."

Since we really like Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia, naturally we wanted to find some way to show it. And instead of dispatching chocolates and roses, we did what people in our position too often do and said, "Let's go shopping."

The Saudis and Egyptians looked around and thought they'd rather like some war planes. We had already taken the Israelis out for war planes. If we really respected them, the Saudis and Egyptians said, we'd order them some war planes, too.

Well, what can you do? You don't want Egypt and Saudi Arabia thinking you don't like them any more. War planes it was.

And even more war planes for Israel after it hinted that we didn't seem to like Israel any more as much as we liked Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Is this all too simplified? I have it from a close reading of almost every statesman's explanation of why the war planes are being sent. They are symbols, if the statesmen can be believed. Merely symbols. With these planes we testify to our respect for Saudi Arabia, our faith in President Sadat and our determination to preserve Israel from harm. No, it is not too simplified.

RUSSELL BAKER

Well, of course we are not simpletons. After all, we know war planes can be used for disagreeable ends, especially when recipients are nervous about their proximity to one another.

But how is one to offer symbols of affection without risking war? The solution proposed by my friend Hess is to create a weapons bank for people we like.

When a country like Egypt, Israel or Saudi Arabia comes to us for tokens of affection and esteem, Hess proposes we send them flowers, candy or theater tickets for immediate use, or as an alaternative offer to put some weapons in the weapons bank for them.

The weapons bank would be located in the United States. Hess believes Fort Knox would be an appropriate location, now that so much of its gold horde has been disbursed.

If, for example, we wanted to give Saudi Arabia 50 war planes as a token of our affection, the planes would be sent to Fort Knox and guarded by the American military so that nobody could take them out of the vaults, including us or the Saudis.

The Saudis would receive a voucher stating that they held 50 war planes worth of American affection. Similar vouchers would be issued to Egypt, Israel and anybody else on whom we wanted to shower affection. When our friends became quarrelsome they would no longer be tempted to damage each other by belligerent exercise of our gifts, but would only have to match vouchers to determine which one of them we liked most.

Any country could exchange its voucher in Washington for candy, flowers, theater tickets, baskets of fruit, Valentines and similar harmless expressions of esteem, in quantities up to the full value of war planes held for it in the weapons bank.

Several persons wise in diplomacy assure me that this proposal is absurd.

Oh, not because countries like Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia don't really want tokens of our respect, affection and esteem, these people say, for they all do. They want tangible evidence that we like them.

Business looks great for plane makers

By DON GRAFF

Business has its ups and downs, perhaps no part of it more so than the aerospace industry.

It seems only yesterday that Lockheed had to be rescued from bankruptcy by a federal loan and drastic retrenchment by Boeing made Seattle an economic disaster area.

But that was yesterday.

Today, the plane makers are riding a boom with all signs indicating the best is yet to come.

Demand for new equipment is strong from both domestic and foreign airlines.

The biggest news in this respect is Boeing's nearly $1 billion deal with Singapore for a fleet of new passenger jets, the largest single sale in commercial aviation history.

Lockheed is not far behind with a half-billion-dollar sale of wide-body Tri-Stars to Pan American Airways and a smaller order from Saudi Arabian Airlines.

The final member of the big three, McDonnell Douglas, has an initial $170 million deal with United Airlines which, with options, could eventually work out to three times that figure.

The boom is rooted in a basically strong international airline industry which is now beginning to replace its aging jet fleets. It was overbuying for these fleets, particularly of the jumbo jets early in the decade, which contributed greatly to the depressed market for new planes in recent years.

The slow market is clearly over with no indications of a similar one again developing, although manufacturers, particularly Boeing, are preparing to introduce some new models.

A bonus for the economy in general of the aerospace boom is the effect on the U.S. Trade and the currently disasterous state of the balance of payments.

U.S. manufacturers dominate the world commerical aircraft market — Boeing alone controls about half. Their exports are expected to reach $9.4 billion by the end of the current year, which should offset a considerable quantity of OPEC oil and Japanese electronics.

Bureaucracy may dampen buccaneers

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Judge Walter P. Gewin, of the Fifth U.S. Circuit, waxed eloquent a couple of months ago in the case of the wrecked Spanish galleon Atocha. "This action," he wrote, "evokes all the romance and danger of the buccaneering days in the West Indies."

Alas for romance and danger and buccaneering, too. The cold and clammy hand of the federal bureaucracy even now is reaching out to suppress the buccaneering spirit. Judge Gewin's opinion, rebuffing some ingenious claims advanced by the Department of the Interior, was filed on March 13. Less than a month later, on aApril 10, the department promulgated some proposed regulations.

The regulations wouldn't exactly overturn Judge Gewin's opinion, but they would broaden the application of the American Antiquities Act of 1906. The general idea is to extend interior's authority over artifacts found on lands owned or controlled by the government of the United States. The word "artifact" would be redefined to include "vessels" and "ships armaments," very few of which are found on federally owned "lands," but no matter. Interior's lawyers regard the bottom of the sea on the Outer Continental Shelf as federally owned land. These are the issues for which lawyers are born.

The pending regulations are only part of the melancholy story. Within the Department of the Interior is a small operation known as the Federal Antiquities Program of the Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation. Charles M. McKinney, manager of the program, wants to see Congress rewrite the 1906 Antiquities Act in ways that might take treasure seekers clean out of business.

McKinney's motives are the very best motives. As a professionally trained archeologist, he is concerned at the "looting" and "pillage" of undersea wrecks. We feel a gross need, he says, to change the act so that it would apply specifically to the Outer Continental Shelf. He would vest in the secretary of the Interior broad authority over any wrecks that might be found and over any treasure that might be salvaged.

Ideally, says the gentleman, federal law would halt all treasure operations until the known wrecked ships could be inventoried. Salvors then could apply for federal permits for exploration. Again, foundations or institutions of higher learning, under the supervision of professional marine archeologists, the retrieved artifacts would become federal property, but the salvors would be compensated for their time and equipment, and they might have first claim to anything the government didn't want to keep.

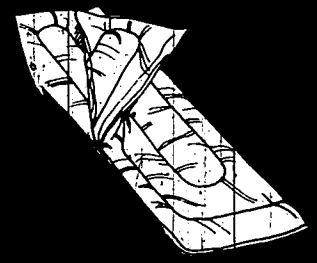

The response to all that is: Oh, dear. If any such rules, regulations and laws had been in effect in 1966, when treasure salvor Melvin Fisher began his search for the Atocha, the search never would have begun. Treasure hunters are members of that rare breed identified as adventurers; they are driven by danger, excitement and dreams of Spanish gold. Such men are not made for the filling out of forms.

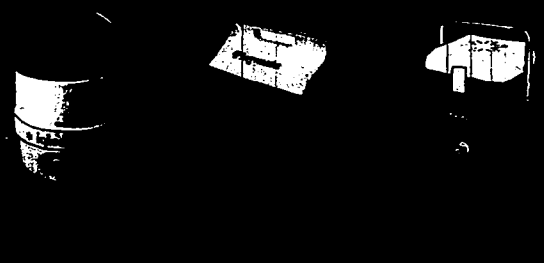

In Fischer's case, it was his own skill, his own luck, and his own initiative that put together a small syndicate of investors to search for the wrecked Atocha. The galleon went down somewhere off the Flordia coast in a hurricane in the late summer of 1622. Fisher and his devoted team found the wreck in 1971. They spent $2 million and recovered gold, silver and armament valued at $6 million.

From the time of Fisher's discovery, our unromantic, skinflinted government has been trying to claim the treasure trove as a government property. Federal lawyers have cited the Antiquities Act, the Abandoned Property act, and the "prerogative rights of the king of England."

MAMA MICHELLE WED

"Mama" Michelle Phillips, 37, was married in Beverly Hills Sunday to Robert Birch, 29, a programming consultant for several radio stations. Miss Phillips — most recently known for her role as Natascha, the second wife of screen idol Rudolf Valentino in the movie named after him — broke into show business in the 60s in The Mamas and Papas singing group, which included Cass Elliot, Denny Doherty and her first husband, John Phillips. (The Phillipses have a daughter, Mackenzie, star of TV's "One Day at a Time.") Her second marriage — to actor-director Dennis Hopper — lasted eight days.

BABYLON REBORN?

Born-again Christian Charles Colson likens modern American society with the decadence of imperial Rome, saying the current worship of comfort will bring our society "toward its own distruction." The aide to former President Richard Nixon told graduating seniors at Gordon College in Wenham, Mass., Sunday: "The idols we worship begin with us. ... Materialism and personal comfort are foremost in our daily lives." Colson, 46, who served seven months in jail for his role in Watergate, adds: "Everything today is measured in terms of dollars, power and personal success."

NIXON SOIREE

The way the book is selling, a celebration doesn't seem in order, but the 35 people gathered anyway at Casa Pacifica in San Clemente, Calif., Sunday to toast former President Richard Nixon and his book "RN: The Memoirs of Richard Nixon." Booksellers report little interest in the book, but writing it was a blessed event for Nixon. "A book is somewhat like a baby being born ..., an event which will occur in our family within the next couple of months," said Nixon, referring to his daughter Julie Eisenhower, who is expecting. Nixon's wife Pat is ailing and couldn't attend, but daughter Tricia Cox stood in.

Carter family gathers for Jana's big day

BUENA VISTA, Ga. (UPI) — Two Styrofoam swans with rain-drooping feather plumes floated on Billy Carter's kidney-shaped swimming pool.

Billy's wife Sybil, and country entertainer Tom T. Hall sang a duet: "It May Be Peanuts To You But It's Love To Us."

"In two weeks we'll be on the grand opry," Hall said after they finished.

Nearby, a rowboat had been filled with bottles of pink champagne and Billy Beer. Now, only melting ice remained.

The occasion was the wedding of Billy's second eldest daughter, Jana, 19, to her high school sweetheart, John Theus, 19, who works in a mobile home factory in nearby Ellaville.

Jana's uncle, the President of the United States, attended the wedding and stayed at the reception for about two hours. The sturdiest and most exuberant of the other 1,000 invited guests were dancing and whooping it up several hours later.

Four vans, generally used for the "Peanut Express" tours around Plains, carried the guests from a 10-acre field filled with their parked cars to the vast yard of Billy Carter's new home.

It was what one person in attendance called "a down-home southern wedding."

The blonde bride cried on her father's arm, and Billy himself shed a tear.

She walked across a white lattice-work bridge spanning the swimming pool to an altar covered with magnolia blossoms.

She had her elder sister, Kim, as maid of honor. Carol Anderson, the former organist at the Plains Baptist Church, played the wedding music and the Rev. Earl Duke of Plains, who is retired, presided.

The bride was in traditional white and her famous father was wearing a white tuxedo. She had seven attendants, including her little sister, Mandy, who was the flower girl.

The sun was setting as the ceremony was held and soon after it was completed the rains started to fall. President Carter got a little damp before he dashed inside the house. The white ostrich feathers on the swan got drenched.

Aerialist with Wallendas narrowly escapes injury

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gusty winds swatted the Great Wallendas during their high-wire acts Sunday and knocked one performer off his perch, but he managed to grab the wire.

Farrell Hettig, 22, who has performed with the Wallenda family for seven years, slipped from the wire while jumping rope 33½ feet above the ground at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

However, Hettig managed to grab the wire and hoist himself up, aided by other aerialists on the 40-foot long wire.

High winds caused Karl Wallenda, the founder and patriarch of the troupe, to slip and fall 120 feet to his death while performing March 22 in Puerto Rico. The Wallendas never perform, or practice, with nets.

Before Sunday's show, the winds were gusty enough to threaten cancellation of the group's most difficult stunt — Rieta Jordan's balancing act on a chair. The chair is then balanced on a pole held between two other performers.

However, the winds calmed down enough to let her perform. Miss Jordan and another member, Mario Bogino, 21, are the children of Carla Wallenda, daughter of Karl.

Analyst scrabble champion

NEW YORK (UPI) — When it comes to betting on scrabble, one would think a linguist who programs a computer to play the word game would be the odds-on favorite over a pension analyst.

But linguist Daniel Pratt of Laurel, Md., finished second Sunday behind David Printz, a 25-year-old pension analyst from San Francisco.

For his lexical gymnastics Printz won the $1,500 prize at the three-day-long North American Invitational Scrabble Crossword Game Players Tournament.

Pratt, who is also a mathematician who programs computers to play the game, and Printz were tied going into the last round of competition with 160 credits each. Printz won an additional 13 credits in a game with Shazzi Feisteim of New York City, giving him a final score of 173 credits.

Pratt could only muster 10 additional credits in his final game, leaving him with a total score of 170 credits. He took home a $1,000 second-place prize.

Michael Senkiewicz of New York City, who listed himself as a "professional game player," came in third with 169 credits.

Labor law revisions stir argument

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary Ray Marshall says revisions are needed in U.S. labor laws that have become a paper tiger to employers "bent on disobeying the law."

But International Chamber of Commerce President Richard Lesher says the proposed revisions are unfair and would drive many small businesses out of operation.

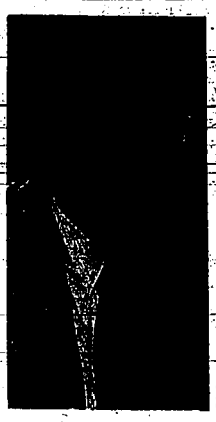

The two had a heated argument in a television interview (ABC-TV's Issues and Answers) over the controversial bill now in the throes of a Senate filibuster.

Meanwhile Senate Republican leader Howard Baker says this issue is producing even more mail than did the explosive Panama Canal treaties, with letters running about 5-1 against the bill.

That assessment jibes with an earlier one from Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who said, "It's fair to say the intensity of the lobbying has been greater than on the Panama Canal issue. On the Canal, ordinary citizens had strong reactions to the issue. This bill is a collection of issues," n

Marshall, in the television interview, said the present labor law is good, but some employers have found it cheaper to ignore it than to comply with it.

"It has not worked very well for those employers bent on disobeying the law," he said. "For them it has become a paper tiger."

RICHARD LESHER
... proposals unfair

RAY MARSHALL
... law flouted now

Lesher argued that the bill unfairly puts new restrictions on management — and none on labor.

As the bill entered a fifth day in the Senate, debate is expected to proceed at a leisurely pace, with only one senator from each side on the floor at a time to protect party interests.

Soon after the filibuster began Tuesday, it began playing to an empty chamber — the only spectators the ever-present tourists. But while the Senate debate arouses little interest, the war of press releases is furious.

Baker said opponents are picking up momentum. Labor lobbyists say they have always counted on 62 or 63 votes for cloture to limit debate — after the first or second attempt — and see no erosion.

Opponents contend one of the motives behind the bill, aside from increasing union membership, is to stop the flight of jobs from the Snow Belt to the Sun Belt, where there is a cheaper labor supply because the unions have no foothold.

Supporters deny the bill is aimed at the South, saying its aim is only at a few lawbreakers, particularly Carolina textile mills.

Union scoffs at GM plan

DETROIT (UPI) — The president of the United Auto Workers Union scoffs at a vow by General Motors Corp. to trim salaries and bonuses of its top executives in line with President Carter's anti-inflation program.

GM Chairman Thomas A. Murphy told stockholders last Friday the company also will work to hold down car prices, but would not rule out further increases this year.

UAW President Douglas Fraser said GM's salary proposal was "hardly a sacrifice" because Murphy's yearly earnings are nearing $1 million, with other GM executives not far behind.

"Somehow I believe the American people are going to have a hard time swallowing talk of restraint from men who get paid almost a million dollars a year — the same men who keep right on adding price increase on top of price increase to the American automobile," Fraser said after the stockholders meeting.

Pay hikes for top GM officials averaged 5.5 percent in 1977. Murphy hit $975,000 in salary and bonuses last year and GM President Elliott M. Estes received $910,000.

Bikini evacuation planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Department officials plan to evacuate the Bikini Atoll, the site of U.S. nuclear bomb tests after World War II, because of a sharp increase in radiation levels in the bodies of its inhabitants, the Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper said it learned that officials of the Interior Department, which administers Bikini as part of a U.S. trust territory, will temporarily move the inhabitants to another Marshall Island atoll within 75 to 90 days.

The Post quoted government scientists as saying the Bikini inhabitants may have ingested in their bodies the largest amount of measurable radiation of any population.

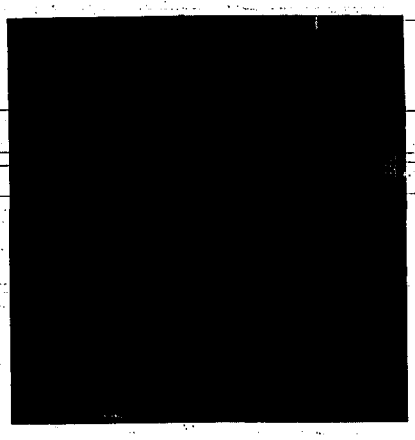

The Bikini Atoll had 120 residents when it was evacuated for a series of nuclear weapons tests between 1946 and 1958. A few were allowed to return in 1969 after it was declared safe for habitation by the Atomic Energy Commission, the Post said.

Nixon host at party

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Nixon played host to 36 persons, most from the publishing field, at a party Sunday evening given to toast the publication of his memoirs.

Among the guests who gathered in the courtyard of Nixon's Spanish-style home, La Casa Pacifica, were the publishers of his book, "RN," and others who helped him put the work together.

Standing in as hostess to the ailing Pat Nixon was daughter Tricia Cox.

Alan: "Some bands can only be made by creating an illusion for the defenders. It is improper to create this illusion by means of remarks, gestures, slow play when there is no problem or anything except the actual cards you play."

Oswald: "When South looked over dummy he realized that his seven bid was silly indeed. There were twelve easy tricks staring him in the face. There was no legitimate way to get a thirteenth."

Alan: "This didn't keep South from working out a nice swindle. He simply ran off his whole trump suit. East held four clubs. So did West. Because each one felt that his partner would hold just three, each threw everything else away to keep clubs and eventually South cashed all his diamonds."

Oswald: "This shouldn't have worked. East should have jettisoned his diamonds in the order 6-8-Q. This would give West a count on the diamond suit. He would know that South held seven spades and five diamonds. The bidding showed that his other card was the ace of hearts and West would chuck all his clubs."

Alan: "He should have, but he didn't."

By United Press International

Today is Monday, May 22, the 142nd day of 1978 with 223 to follow.

This is National Maritime Day.

The moon is full.

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

British novelist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was born May 22, 1859. Actor Sir Lawrence Olivier was born May 22, 1907.

On this day in history:

In 1868, the "Great Train Robbery" was staged as seven members of the Reno gang stole $96,000 from an express car at Marshfield, Ind.

In 1924, discovery of the body of 13-year-old Bobby Franks of Chicago led to the arrest of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb. They were sentenced to 99 years in prison for the grisly, so-called "thrill killing."

In 1943, Russia announced dissolution of the Communist International, founded in 1919 to promote world revolution.

In 1971, at least 800 persons died in an earthquake in eastern Turkey.

A thought for the day: American poet Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "Happy is the house that shelters a friend."

Restrictions no brake on U.S. aid to embattled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Neither Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd nor U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young buys President Carter's claim that congressional restrictions impede U.S. efforts to help countries fighting communist-trained troops in Africa.

Carter, in a breakfast meeting with congressional leaders last week when there were indications U.S. paratroops might be used to rescue Europeans trapped by fighting in Zaire, complained that congressional restraints on presidential actions hampered quick response to Soviet-or Cuban-assisted insurgencies.

But Young, the administration's point man on Africa, said in an interview on CBS-TV's Face the Nation Sunday, "I don't believe the president's hands are tied."

Byrd told reporters over the weekend he saw no reason to relax restrictions on presidential authority to commit U.S. forces or supplies abroad — restraints approved by Congress during and after the Vietnam war.

"The State Department has been unable to provide documentation thus far to indicate the president's hands are tied in giving assistance to friendly governments attempting to combat communist insurgency or incursions," Byrd said Saturday.

Opposition within the administration and on Capitol Hill to loosening the hard-won restrictions developed as the White House responded to its first foreign crisis — the invasion of Zaire by communist-backed rebels.

The immediate crisis may be over, but the administration still shows interest in winning changes in some foreign policy legislation passed by the Democratic Congress in the Nixon-Ford years.

The president, returning to Plains, Ga., Sunday to attend the wedding of a niece, told reporters limited U.S. assistance in Zaire was "just about over."

"Barring some unforeseen developments, I think our my authorization for help is probably over but we don't ever know what will happen in the future," he said.

American assistance involved 18 C-141 Air Force transport planes ferrying Belgian and French troops and supplies to three airfields beyond the Shaba province area where Zaireans were battling rebels.

A Pentagon spokesman said a small number of Americans — described as "considerably less than 100" — were on the ground coordinating landings, takeoffs and refueling.

No combat troops were involved, the spokesman said.

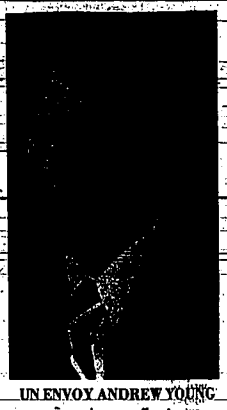

In his complaint to congressional leaders Carter was not specific, but at least two measures now limit a president.

The War Powers Act passed in 1973 over Richard Nixon's veto requires a president to notify Congress within 48 hours of sending U.S. troops abroad and restricting the commitment to 60 days unless Congress approves more.

And a restriction authored by Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, in 1975, to prevent the Ford administration from continuing CIA assistance to pro-western forces in Angola, bars direct or covert U.S. military or paramilitary assistance or involvement in Angola without congressional approval.

In an interview with editors made public Saturday, Carter detailed the problems:

"We try to meet that (Soviet-Cuban) challenge on a non-military basis. We have a limited ability to supply defensive weapons to those (friendly African) countries, under very tight constraints from laws that control my actions, and we take advantage of that," he said.

SALT terms almost ready

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Paul Warnke, chief U.S. arms negotiator, says "well over 95 percent" of a SALT II treaty has been agreed to — a package of some 50 pages of detailed language that may be the most complex and controversial treaty in recent American history.

The remaining issues are specific controls over a new, large family of Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles and verifiable, agreed limitations over production and deployment of the Soviet Backfire bomber.

U.S. officials believe agreement on both is within negotiating range.

Warnke says agreement may be reached "within weeks, rather than months," but cautions the remaining issues are there because they are difficult to solve.

Progress toward a new SALT agreement is expected to become a main subject of discussion at a special session of the U.N. General Assembly on disarmament, starting Tuesday.

The real breakthough in the negotiations came before the Carter administration resumed negotiations which had been going on fitfully since the fall of 1972.

That was the informal agreement put together in the Vladivistok summit between General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev and Gerald Ford. Both sides would limit their strategic arsenals to equivalent amounts (2,400, to be reduced further, to a reported 2,250, by 1985).

For the first time, the United States pinned the Soviets down to the fundamental understanding that the two sides should be numerically equal.

In SALT I, signed in June 1972, the Soviets had a numerical edge, designed to balance the U.S. edge in technical superiority and large number of nuclear systems (such as F-4 fighter-bombers) stationed in or around western Europe.

By signing the agreement the Soviets implicitly agreed to exclude those American forward-based systems.

That was the great leap forward. Since then, the work has amounted to chipping away at the formidable mountain of details.

A later impasse developed over new weapons — called "gray area" systems — such as the extremely accurate U.S. cruise missiles, and the Soviet Backfire. In May 1977, the two sides agreed to an ingenious legal structure to avoid the roadblock.

The draft agreement is split into three parts:

—A treaty, to run until October 1985, which will limit the total number of launch vehicles — submarine-launched, as well as oland-based and heavy bombers — and also limit MIRVs (multiple warheads).

Oil surplus biggest producer worry

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The United Arab Emirates oil minister says he expects no change in the price of oil at the June 17 Geneva meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the Middle East Economic Survey said today.

In a related development, the oil minister of Kuwait told a Saudi Arabian newspaper the oil surplus on world markets was one of the greatest problems facing the oil cartel.

"As regards the Geneva conference, I am not expecting any change in the status quo in respect of the current dollar price of oil," UAE Oil Minister Maneh Said al Otaiba said.

Citing a surplus of more than 2 million barrels a day as a major factor in keeping prices down, Otaiba said "I don't really see any logic in calling for price increases at the moment..."

"I feel strongly that we should let market forces work without interference from either producers or consumers," he said.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa Sabah, in an interview today with the Saudi Arabian newspaper Al Jazirah, said OPEC's main problem was the surplus of oil in world markets.

"Once we resolve this problem, other less important matters like the decline in the price of the U.S. dollar and the increase in cost of our imports, will sort themselves out," Sabah said.

Kuwait and Saudi Arabia have advocated a "controlled production scheme" which they said would eventually balance OPEC exports and world demands.

Georgian sees no wrong in small monetary gifts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An aide to millionaire Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., says he sees nothing improper with the senator's practice of financing most personal cash expenses by accepting small gifts of pocket money from backers.

Talmadge, former governor of Georgia and now chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, says on his returns to Georgia throughout his 30-year career in public office he has been showered with "small gifts of cash."

The Washington Star quoted him Sunday as saying: "Wherever I go (in Georgia), people entertain me, lodge me, give me small amounts of money."

Talmadge said he got along on $25 a week in pocket money, and paid for any major expenses with checks.

He said the money was "volunteered as gifts — small, inconsequential amounts."

SEN. HERMAN TALMADGE
... pocket money helps

Talmadge's Senate financial disclosure report listed property, partnerships, stocks and bonds valued at between $1.9 million and $4 million, including a 1,389-acre estate in Lovejoy, Ga.

It also showed the four-term senator received $24,700 for speeches he gave.

"My out-of-pocket expenses come from donations friends give me —$5, a $10 bill, sometimes $15 or $20," he said. "They come up and say, they know I have a lot of expenses back in Washington and they want to help me."

The newspaper said details of Talmadge's financial affairs surfaced in divorce settlement proceedings with his wife, Elizabeth, a candidate for Congress.

According to the proceedings and court files at McDonough, Ga., Talmadge wrote only two $300 checks between 1970 and 1976 that may have been for personal expenses: one to "cash" and another to himself, the newspaper said.

Discrimination for fat

By Abigail Van Buren

©1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Now I've heard everything! My niece, who happens to be a very good student, claims that she was suspended from Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., because she is overweight. Can you believe that? She said that she and three others were kicked out of the university because they failed to lose at least one pound a week in accordance with a pledge they signed when they entered the university.

I can't for the life of me understand what a person's weight has to do with his scholastic record, and I find it hard to believe that a school with the fine reputation enjoyed by Oral Roberts University would ever make such a rule.

Abigail Van Buren

My niece has always been a fairly good student, but it's possible that she flunked out and just made up that story to save face.

Will you please look into this and let me know if this kid is putting me on or if such a rule really exist?

STEAMED IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR STEAMED: It's true. It seems that your niece ate herself out of the university. But I'm told that every student at O.R.U. pledges that he (or she) will make every effort to keep physically fit, and the university provides a diet and exercise program to help. Furthermore, I have it orally from Oral himself that this rule includes the faculty, too!

DEAR ABBY: Our 28-year-old daughter has been self-supporting since she graduated from college, and we have always been very proud of her. (She's in fashion.)

Yesterday she came over for dinner and her father and I nearly fainted when we saw her. She looked as though she had given herself a cheap home perm and didn't bother to set it!

It looked terrible and we told her so. She said we would get used to it because it is the latest thing.

Abby, her beautiful blond head was just a frizzy mop, with no shape or style. I can't for the life of me understand why any fashion-conscious young woman would want to go around looking that way.

I am 47—not exactly a relic—and I appreciate up-to-date fashions and hairstyles, but I can't understand this new hideous hairstyle, can you?

HORRIFIED IN HOUSTON

DEAR HORRIFIED: No. But cheer up. This too shall pass.

Teen asks for diet

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I'm a 15-year-old with drastic weight problems. I know you've probably heard this before, but I've tried several diets, but to no avail. The low-carbohydrate ones all sapped my strength, and the calorie-restricted ones took too much courage and the fasting fad did me no good at all.

So as my final try I'm asking you for a diet that a school-going person could stick to without embarrassment. I weigh, and please keep this confidential, approximately 260 pounds.

If you have something please send it soon as I'm anxious to join my peers and become a social incast again.

Lawrence E. Lamb M.D.

Dear Reader,

I never use names with columns so your identity is safe, unless you blow your cover by telling everyone your letter will be in my column.

Yes, your story is a bit familiar. And considering the enormous weight problem you have you will need medical supervision and help while reaching your goal. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, as it will provide a diet plan for you that is sensible and will help you lose weight gradually. It is a balanced diet. Others who want this plan can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Now a word of advice. Don't expect to become an incast overnight. You should not lose more than two pounds a week and one pound a week is fine. That is the only way to diet safely and get results. So you are looking at a long-term project. Your doctor will know if you have any underlying medical problems that are related to your obesity that need special management.

Do take full advantage of exercise to help you lose weight. For very heavy people I usually recommend walking. Start walking and walk and walk and walk. The more you are able to increase your walking every day the more effective your program will be, and the better you will feel while doing it. That will also help you save your valuable muscles as the fat peels off.

Set some intermediate goals based on a one-pound-a-week rate and chart your progress. It will be a morale booster as you go along and see yourself meet or beat your goals. If you have the will power to stick with it you can do it.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

Could you possibly give me some information on hair care and baldness? At 21 I still have a full head of hair, of course, but would like to keep it that way.

Deaf Reader,

Don't say 'of course' because some young men have male pattern baldness at the forehead area very early in life.

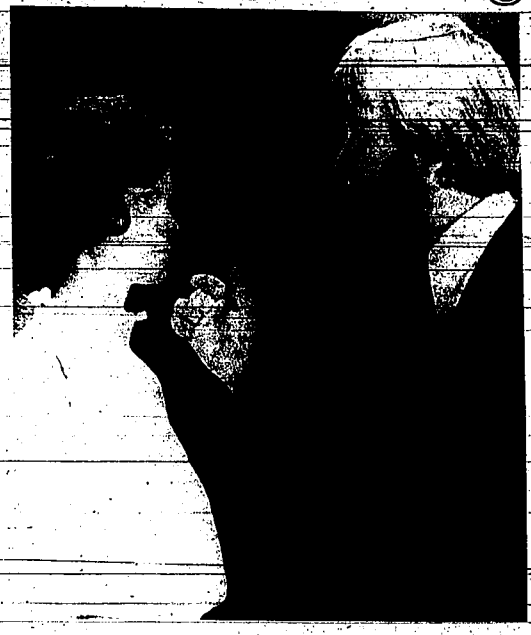

The most practical thing I can tell you is to keep your hair clean. Some people have more trouble with oily scalp than others. A mild shampoo used as often as necessary, even if that means daily, helps keep hair healthy. The accumulation of oily secretions can lead to inflammations and processes similar to acne. The resulting inflammation can affect the hair follicles.

As a male you may not have to worry about curlers, pony tails and hot combs (although many males do use everything women use). In general anything that pulls or tightens the hair may cause injury to the hair. Loose hair treated as naturally as possible and kept clean is your best bet. Bleaches, dyes and exotic treatments are not natural and some pay the price by having less than an optimally healthy head of hair. Like many other aspects of health, nature's way is the best way.

NILS KROGSTAD THREATENS NORA HELMER OVER MONEY

Company One does Henrik Ibsen play

TWIN FALLS — Rehearsals are underway for Company One's performance of "A Doll's House" by Henrik Ibsen.

The production is slated for June 1, 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. in the fireside room of the First United Presbyterian Church at 209 5th Ave. N. in Twin Falls.

Ibsen, a 19th Century Norwegian playwright famous for dramatic works which challenged hypocrisy in his society, made social commentary in "A Doll's House" which still has bearing in modern America.

The story focuses on the struggle of Nora Helmer to free herself from adverse effects of her overbearing and dominant husband Torvald, played by Curt Leslie of Twin Falls. Nora is played by Mari Shine of Kimberly.

Nora, a strong, independent woman, shoulders all the responsibility for supporting the household and caring for her children during her husband's illness and, unknown to him, also assumes a financial burden to help her family weather the crisis.

Nora's courageous response to her difficulties, many of them aggravated by societal views toward women in her day, carry Ibsen's timeless message still relevant in today's world.

Other local people in the cast include: Tom Costello, who plays Dr. Rank; Vicki Childs, who plays Mrs. Lind; Ted Mangini, who portrays Nils Krogstad; Ann Marie, played by Rose-Marie Thomason and Helen, played by Nancy Shrank.

Tickets to the three June performances are $2.50 for adults, $2 for senior citizens and students and $1 for children under 12.

Edward D. Britt, drama teacher at the two Twin Falls junior high schools, directs the show.

Britt and other members of Company One formed the group more than two years ago to bring a variety of theatrical presentations to Twin Falls audiences.

Since the group's formation, the players have presented such varied theatrical fare as "A Streetcar Named Desire," a serious drama by Tennessee Williams, "The Servant of Two Masters," a farce by Goldoni, and "Under the Apple Tree," a comedy by Mark Twain.

CSI offers paper making, paper painting classes

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho Art Department is offering two summer Paper Making Workshops to be held June 5 to 29 in the new Art Complex.

The Paper Maing Workshop will meet Monday through Thursday from 9:15-12:15. This class will explore the processes of making paper from pulp including: pouring, pulling, casting and laminating paper. Students will also learn processes of making molds to use in casting three-dimensional paper works.

A Works On Paper Painting Workshop will meet Monday through Thursday from 1 to 4 p.m. This class will explore non-traditional concepts of painting on paper including: mixed media, collage, dyes, staining and paper-making techniques.

Students may receive two credits per class. Registration is now underway. For further information contact Michael Green at 733-9554 extension 260 or 733-9624.

Paper is cellulose which comes from plant or vegetable fibers. Because cotton, which is 95 percent cellulose, is more profitably made into fabrics, the raw fibers are rarely used in paper.

Until most recently, most rag paper was made from rag because cellulose is not affected by years of washing and wearing. Mills today use cloth remnants from clothing manufacturers and cotton linters (a fuzz of short fibers that clings to cottonseeds after they are ginned.) Chemicals are not needed to produce rag paper.

The fibers used in paper making should be long and cotton fibers are extremely long, thin and twisted, making them very flexible.

Linen is similar to cotton but the fibers are thicker and straighter. Linen paper is stiff and strong. Hemp, jute, and manilla fibers are used in coarse, heavy papers.

Tree fibers are longer than most plants, but the longest wood fibers are only about 5 percent as long as cotton or linen fibers. They are also only 50 percent cellulose, the other 50 percent is lignin which binds the fibers together, and resin.

It is possible to make paper of lesser quality from wood without removing these substances, and such pulp is the main ingredient in newsprint. Lignin oxidizes rapidly, however; it is what makes newspaper clippings turn yellow and brittle.

The process of making paper has changed little in over 2,000 years.

The first paper was made in 105 A.D. in China. Before then writing was done on bamboo scrolls and silk.

Paper was introduced into Europe in the 12th Century. Earlier vellum and parchment (made from animal skins) were used. Paper was first called cloth parchment.

In order to make paper, the cellulose fibers must be thoroughly macerated with water until each filament is a separate unit, swollen and suspended in water. Paper pulp is roughly 95 percent water and 5 percent fiber.

A mortar and pestle and later a stamping mill were used to macerate fibers. During the 17th century the Hollander Beater was invented in Holland.

The beater macerates the fibers and pounds them with water until they are hydrocellulose (that is, until water has penetrated so deeply that the many bonds between the fibers are broken. Only then can paper be made.

A sheet of paper is formed when a thick layer of these hydrocellulose fibers is lifted from the water on a sieve-like screen. The water drains, leaving a sheet of matted fibers some 4-5 times as thick as the final dried sheet will be.

During drying, fibers are drawn closer and closer together until, as the last of the water is dried out, surface tension causes hydrogen bonding to join adjacent cellulose molecules. No adhesive are necessary.

Tests show brown-eyed people react faster than others to stimuli. And the darker the eyes, the quicker the reaction, it's claimed. Interesting, if true. And if true, just as interesting is another theory about it: Melanin is what gives the brown eyes their color. Neuromelanin is what serves as a semiconductor switching device in the nervous system. Maybe these two substances are genetically tied together somehow.

Maybe the best-known product of the 3M Company is Scotch tape. But probably the least known is phony blood, sold to movie, TV and stage producers for their gory scenes.

JOHN

Q. "Aren't most baby boys called John named in honor of St. John?"

A. Possibly, but which St. John? There are as many as 60 St. Johns on the Roman Calendar of Saints.

Q. "That dog Sandy in the Broadway show 'Annie,' where'd he come from?"

A. A cage in the Connecticut Humane Society pound. Pretty lucky pup. He was about to be done away with.

Q. "How many women who become full-fledged medical doctors quit work to bring up their own children?"

A. Seven out of 100, about.

Q. "Wasn't Benjamin Franklin also the inventor of toothpaste?"

A. One of the inventors. His formula called for crushed charcoal mixed with honey.

BIG BERG

There it goes, already northwest of South America's southern tip, heading toward Africa: An iceberg 36 times the size of Bermuda. Watchers aren't worried, though. They figure it will break up when it gets into warmer waters. Besides, it's not on a regular shipping lane. Still, an iceberg 36 times as big as Bermuda must be something to behold, what?

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed Monday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 4.07-point loser Friday, was off 0.69 point to 846.75 shortly after the opening. Despite losses Friday and Thursday, the Dow gained 6.15 points overall last week.

Advances led declines, 263 to 208, among the 736 issues crossing the NYSE tape in the early going.

Early turnover amounted to about 1,030,000 shares.

Analysts said investors are growing more concerned about higher interest rates and rising inflation. Many economists are predicting a recession later this year despite the recent improvement in the economy.

Many investors were disturbed by a government report that April durable goods rose only 0.4 percent and that nondefense capital goods orders declined 2.3 percent. This does not bode well for the economy.

The Federal Reserve Board triggered selling Friday by raising the federal funds rate banks charge one another for overnight loans to 7½ percent from 7¼ percen5 even though the nation's basic money supply fell $4.3 billion in the latest reporting week. The money growth rate lately has exceeded Fed targets.

Previously, investors had reacted favorably to Fed tightening efforts because they showed the board's determination to fight inflation. But traders apparently are becoming fearfkl too much tightening will slow the economy and produce a recession.

The Fed's action helped the dollar rebound on European exchanges along with reports that congressionjl conferees had reached a compromise on natural gas pricing. A Carter administration prediction that inflation would ease later this year also helped the dollar.

Indonesian economy stabilizes

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — A survey of expert banking and diplomatic opinion indicates that Indonesia, with a lot of help from its friends, is moving toward economic stability from the chaos of the Pertamina scandal three years ago.

Statistics gleaned from interviews here show that the government's cool-headed belt tightening brought a satisfactory 7 percent economic growth rate in 1977 and that inflation was held to about 11 percent from the 20 percent of only 2-½ years ago.

Oil production and exports were at a record high with an average daily output of 1.7 million barrels and successful restructuring of $1.1 billion in overseas loans has been accomplished at significantly lower interest rates.

The projected 1978 budget of $11.6 billion was backed by a favorable balance in payment funds of $1.19 billion compared with near bankruptcy in 1975.

Despite the emergence of a defiant student movement calling for faster reform and president Suharto's resignation, Suharto is firmly in control of the 920-member MPR (People's Congress) and it elected him to a third five-year term on March 11.

Indonesia's most recent economic crisis was born in a scandal that is still being investigated for corruption — the 1975 financial collapse of the state-owned oil company Pertamina, through which all of Indonesia's oil investment, exploration, production and exports are managed.

The company was allowed to operate virtually independent of other government controls and branched out into such fields as steel manufacturing, real estate, agriculture and what turned out to be a disastrous tanker building program.

Pertamina was directed by Gen. Ibnu Sutowo, a highly influencial finance ministry budget director who during his tenure with the state-owned firm purveyed financial and other favors to supporters of the government.

He was dismissed by Suharto in April 1976 after the discovery that Pertamina had run up a $10.6 billion debt. It also could not remit $1.1 billion collected in oil revenues to the government or pay back huge loans and interest overseas to finance its seemingly endless list of ambitious projects.

Suharto moved to dig Indonesia out of the Pertamina scandal. The government guaranteed to cover all of Pertamina's legitimate debts or negotiate them down to mutually acceptable terms.

With the help of an international consortium of bankers led by Morgan Guaranty Trust and a 14-nation organization known as the Intergovernment Group for Indonesia, the pertamina crisis has been largely resolved — but at great expense to the nation's previously projected economic development.

Indonesian's major trading partners — primarily the United States and Japan — increased imports of oil, rubber, tin, palm oil, timber, coffee and supplies from Indonesia's growing natural gas fields.

A U.S. Embassy economic report describes Indonesia's 1977 export performance as "bullish," but expresses disappointment over the lagging development of the domestic economy.

The report, seconded by banking and other diplomatic circles, said that Indonesia would be hard pressed to maintain the 1977 export pace. It noted that oil exploration necessary to maintain growth and production was resumed only recently after two years of virtual idleness.

The American report also said that a forecast for an 8.2 percent increase in non-oil export income was "highly problematical, depending as it does on world markets and particularly on the Japanese and U.S. markets."

Graft and corruption in all sectors during the 10 years of Suharto's rule have caused an immeasureable drag on the economy and the government's credibility. While the president has never been linked with such activities, there is a constant underground whispering campaign naming his wife, many other relatives and friends as major violators of the public trust.

Safe way to use pesticides

Now come the push and clank of backyard spreaders across the land pouring out a precision flow of pesticides, as millions of us try to protect our vegetable and flower gardens against the annual invasion of pests. Along with baseball and barbecues, this is the beginning of the season for battling cinch bugs, mosquitoes, hordes of other unwanted invaders.

Despite the bitter controversy of the past decade over many home pesticides, these products perform a vital role in our abundant agricultural harvests and in our comfortable outdoor lives at home. Their benefits cannot and must not be ignored.

Many insect-borne diseases — including malaria, yellow fever and typhus — have been brought under control by pesticides.

Millions of people in the Third World and underdeveloped countries owe their very lives to the use of pesticides which have enhanced their food production.

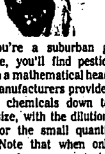

We never could have created so booming a do-it-yourself home gardening economy without the striking help of pesticides. Used discriminately, pesticides can be of indisputable value. Used indiscriminately, they can dispense dangerous poisons not only to those who handle them but also bystanders accidentally exposed.

A new classification statement on pesticides will affect all farmers and home gardeners this year. Since late last October, all pesticide products must be classified for either "general" or "restricted use."

"Restricted use" pesticides are highly toxic, may require special knowledge or equipment for application, usually will not be on dealers' shelves for you, the homeowner.

"General" classification on the label before specific directions for use means the products are available for our use.

No matter how valuable these and other classifications may become, take an extra precaution by reading and following all label directions and warnings before you use any pesticide.

SYLVIA PORTER

If you're a suburban gardener, for instance, you'll find pesticide chemical dilution a mathematical headache. To help you, manufacturers provide packaging of garden chemicals down to homeowner retail size, with the dilution rates on the label for the small quantities you will need. Note that when only the larger package of a newer material is available, the dilution rates will be for chemical mechanical equipment. Many county agriculture agents are adapting a simple conversion rate to reduce the dilution rate to the size you need.

When directions call for two pounds to 100 gallons of water, as an illustration, a simple rule is to use two tablespoons to one gallon of water. If the directions call for four pounds to 100 gallons, convert to four tablespoons per gallon.

The Environment Protection Agency (EPA), which is involved in the registration of all pesticide products marketed in the U.S., sets federal guidelines for manufacturers. Producers of pesticide products must submit data showing that, when used as directed, the pesticide will not only be effective against listed pests but also will not cause serious adverse effects on the user, animals or crops or our environment. EPA requires that certain statements appear on all product labels and reviews these before approving the pesticides for public sale. In turn, it is against federal law to use a pesticide in conflict with the directions on the label. The EPA urges you to:

- Study the label first and follow directions carefully.
- Don't apply pesticides outdoors on windy days and avoid inhaling pesticides or spilling them on your skin or on the ground.
- Wash thoroughly with soap and water after using a pesticide. Wash clothing separately from the family wash.
- Never transfer a pesticide into a container — such as a soft drink bottle — that might attract children. It is illegal to do so and could be extremely dangerous.
- Dispose of all empty containers as label directs.

The U.S. Agriculture Department adds these safety tips:

- Never smoke while handling a pesticide.

A Tribute To . . . Management

by JACK WARBERG

Have you perhaps thought about this? Two vastly important words appear in print every time the U.S. Secretary of Labor issues his annual report. These words affect about 90% of the people in America. The words are "gainfully employed". Employed by whom? By the men who put up the capital to start and keep countless factories, shops, stores, airplane factories and shipbuilding works in business! With vision, ingenuity and executive ability, these leaders are the payroll guarantors. They generate the 'financial juice' that keeps the wheels of commerce humming. They gamble with the whims of local and national conditions . . . the valleys and peaks of sales charts . . . the temperamental, unpredictable buying or non-buying attitudes of Mr. and Mrs. General Public. We proudly salute these courageous Captains of Industry, and applaud their indomitable will to win. They have helped to make our nation the greatest, richest, most prosperous land in the world!

Court takes tax contract case in Montana dispute

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to rule whether it is constitutional for a state to tax contractors working on federal projects within its borders.

The justices also agreed to review a lower-court's disclosure requirement which the Federal Reserve System said could undermine its regulation of the nation's money supply.

And, on a day given over largely to action on business cases, the court offered to settle a dispute over state regulation of interest rates on bank-issued credit cards.

In some of the other actions, the court:

—Ruled 5-4 that an employer who goes bankrupt still must pay the full penalty for failing to collect withholding taxes from workers.

—Let stand an Alabama Supreme Court decision that language used in a federal grievance proceeding may be the basis for a libel suit under state law.

—In another libel case, denied a hearing to Pacific Gas and Electric Co. and one of its engineers, being sued for damages by a television producer on grounds he was falsely accused of doctoring a documentary film.

—Let stand a ruling that federal agents acted properly in the warrantless search of a domestic fishing boat, suspected of carrying marijuna, nine miles off the California coast.

—Declined to get involved in a dispute over water rights in Nevada.

—Turned down an appeal by the president of a Massachusetts fireworks plant convicted of causing, through negligence, the deaths of three workers in an explosion.

The case involving state taxation of federal contractors came from Montana, which with the support of 21 other states appealed a lower-court ruling striking down its levy on the gross receipts of "public contractors."

States supporting Montana argued the case could have "far-reaching effects" on firms doing business with the federal government.

A three-judge U.S. District Court panel in Helena ruled last October that the tax unconstitutionally "discriminates against the government in favor of private contractors" and against out-of-state public contractors in favor of in-state contractors. It ordered repayment of taxes collected since mid-1971.

Salmon school ballot canvass tonight

SALMON (UPI) — Votes will be canvassed tonight in the controversial Salmon School Board election.

Meantime, the chairman of the Salmon School Board feels the entire controversy over absentee ballots in Tuesday's school board election is "an attempt to discredit the election, the school administration and the whole school function by losers who are sore."

Chairman Robert Stoddard said at issue is the method of distribution of the absentee ballots, adding the question is whether absentee ballots can be delivered to another person other than the voter himself.

"The clerk of the board is charged with the responsibility of delivering absentee ballots," Stoddard said. "In the past, people have come in and taken an absentee ballot out and back or it has to be delivered by registered mail."

"That doesn't mean that the clerk of the board has to do it; he just has to see that it is done. My position at this point in time is that it is a administerial duty."

Old-fashioned burlesque gets last Trocadero show

By HAROLD H. MARTIN

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The costumes had come out of mothballs and the combo had no name but there was wall to wall audience as old fashioned burlesque made one final gasp at the "The Troc," a faded theater destined for a new future.

In its plushier years the Trocadero, an 1880 Victorian structure, hosted such comic celebrities as Abbott and Costello, and peeling prettles like Gypsy Rose Lee.

"We had 10-12 people — comedians, straight men, acrobats, singers. We had a wire act and a bicycle act and a seven piece band," said Maxie Furman, a top banana with fast patter who played the Troc in the 1930s, and managed it from 1957-72.

"Between engagements," as he put it, with Ann Corio's "This Was Burlesssque," Furman had come up from Atlantic City, N.J., to help Wynn Moore, Merrill Reese and Jack O'Reilly put on the Troc's last burlesque show, before it became a Chinese movie theater.

The three men are the early morning team for radio station WWDB-FM and developed the idea after a casual remark from Moore that "One thing I'd never done was a comedy routine at a burlesque house and it was something I should do before I die."

Arrangements were made with the theater's owners and tickets offered to listeners. Within days the show was sold out and a second night added and sold. The audience of 500 was nearly half female, and mostly of the age that remembered earlier days when a show at the Troc was the highlight of an evening on the town.

"This is pure nostalgia," said Moore before the last show went on.

Sitting on hard wooden chairs or cracked old leather seats, they were promised a full show "if the stage holds up" and their first treat came from Furman, dressed in a cloth cap, baggy pants and flowing tie.

His standup routine included a little remembrance of one night at the Troc when only one man was in the audience.

"You're a brave fellow, I says, and just for you I'm going to do the whole show.

"OK, but hurry up, he says. I'm the janitor and want to clean up."

The audience had heard it before but laughed as they did at his naughtier lines, cast from a creaky stage over an orchestra pit filled with rubble and the shell of a grand piano.

And then came Red Hot Pepper, the Italian Bombshell, a local ecdysiast who, in keeping with the modesty of days gone by, kept a little bit of her leopard skin costume on.

Red Hot Pepper, and the dusky beauty, Yolanda Lace, were some of the last in a long line of girls to carry names more exotic than their acts, thanks to Furman.

When the Troc was declining and couldn't afford the salaries of the class acts, Furman said, he tried to dress up second rate acts with unusual names. Since the idea occurred the week John Glenn made his first orbit, the first girl to be so dubbed became Miss Luna Landing.

To follow were Bermuda Schwartz, Ana Cyn, Miss Pain Killer of 1971, Melba the Toast of the Town and many others.

Furman was also the center of several of the night's blackout sketches. In one he played the fast talking judge to Moore's indignant prosecutor. The sketch owes its title, "Here Comes the Judge," to a cry Furman makes as he explores the upper reaches of Jade Green's thigh while trying to determine why a young defendant (Reese) was intent on committing robbery.

It ends, almost, with Jade declaring in suprise, "But judge, I didn't know he was after my money."

In another Furman was the country cousin enjoying the hospitality of his city kin's (O'Reilly) French maid, alias Jade Green in a diminutive black skirt and tinier apron who wants more than Furman can provide.

Jade and Furman combined again in the quarreling husband and wife sketch that claims to have inspired Jackie Gleason's popular television series, "The Honeymooners."

When Furman wasn't taking his baggy pants off, or putting them on, there was the banter, some bawdy, some repeatable:

"When you married me you told me you worshipped the ground I walked on," said petulant Jade.

"I thought your old man owned the property," shot back Furman.

Spiced between were the burlesque girls such as Marilyn Marshall, who began as a chorus girl in Pittsburgh 25 years before. As the drums rolled she revived for one last swing her tassle twirling act — first clockwise, then in counter rotation and then in opposite directions.

Princess Renee added a fire dance that lit more than cigarettes.

Jade Green started as a Troc house girl 18 years before, subbing for acts that didn't show, as stripper and straight lady. To her fell the finale.

Stripping her lavender costume to the minimum of the night, with whistles and catcalls echoing off the peeling walls and cracking mirrors, she performed pectoral exercises to "Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom Time."

Fifteen minutes later the last of the audience filed out and men in rough clothes and work boots came in to continue their renovation task. "The Naughty Lady of Arch Street," as she was sometimes dubbed, was gone.

Crib death linked to mother

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — University of Michigan scientists say there is new evidence to suggest that mothers of babies who died of "crib death" were exposed to disease-causing agents prior to giving birth.

Researchers said Friday much remains to be learned but they were confident of ultimately finding the cause of the mysterious killer known as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Earlier this year epidemiologists at the UM School of Public Health discovered antibodies in the lung tissues of infants who had died from non-traumatic causes. Children who die from traumatic causes, such as an accident or a fall, do not show antibodies on autopsy.

Researchers said they now believe that mothers of crib death babies may have been exposed to the disease-causing agents before the birth of the infant. Such exposure, they said, may cause the mother to develop antibodies against the disease agent, thus making the unborn child fatally sensitive.

"One thing is clear from our studies to date and that is that the presence of antibodies proves that crib death is not mysterious but caused by specific even though complex agents," said W. Wilbur Ackermann, a professor of epidemiology who heads the crib death study.

Ackermann said the virus responsible for the antibodies may effect the unborn infant in much the same way the measles virus affects infants whose mothers are exposed to the disease during pregnancy.

"There is no evidence, however, that the cause of crib death is a single virus," he said.

Ackermann said researchers have three more important steps to tae before they can solve the riddle of crib death: to determine whether one or a group of disease agents is involved; to provide more precise diagnosis of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome; and to try to recognize high risk groups by prenatal examinations.

The UM researchers will present their latest finding along with a scientific exhibit, at a meeting of the American Society of Microbiology this month.

Student dies in plane crash near Kimberly

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — An Idaho State University student was killed when he flew his antique plane nose first into a wheat field south of Kimberly Sunday.

Officers said Weldon Dean Wilson, 21, of Eagle, was killed about 9:15 a.m. after twice buzzing a small landing strip on the Ed McCarty property.

Coroner Cloyce Edwards said Wilson died instantly of multiple injuries. The single place plane hit nose first, pushing the engine back into the cockpit, pinning the victim in the wreckage.

Officers and ambulance crews worked for nearly an hour to free the pilot from the wreck.

The plan crashed about 5½ miles south and one-half mile east of Kimberly on the farm owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lierman. The couple was in the field about a quarter of a mile away and witnessed the crash.

Wilson was planning to meet a friend Kim Shewmaker of Kimberly, at the McCarty landing strip.

Witnesses said he had buzzed the strip once, made a "crop duster" turn and buzzed the strip again.

The young pilotHe then headed west over the Lierman field ,Ron Lierman said, when the plane went into a spin and nosed straight down into the field.

"We know quite a few of the pilots who use the McCarty landing strip, and when a plane comes in we usually stop and watch it. The all silver plane was one we hadn't seen before and we were watching him buzz the field, and getting a little worried about how low he was flying," Nancy Lierman said.

"I saw him head west at a low altitude, and then go straight up into the air, flip over and start to spin. I think he spun around about twice, heading straight into the ground. He wasn't more than 100 to 150 feet up by my guess when he started straight down and hit nose first," Ron Lierman said.

Young Shewmaker, who was waiting for his friend to land at the strip also witnessed the fatal crash.

He was the first to reach the scene.

Mr. and Mrs. Lierman also drove into the field to see if they could help . Shewmaker told them he couldn't find a pulse and believed his friend had died on impact.

He told the Liermans young Wilson had been given the plane by his father and that it was an antique.

Shewmaker said only two days earlier he had finished work on the plane and motor and the two were going flying to try it out. Shewmaker is also a pilot.

County sheriff's officers Jim Munn and Harold Jensen were investigting along with Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) officials who arrived shortly after the crash.

Officer Jensen said papers in the plane identified it as a "Buhl LA-1".

It was a single seat plane with a glass covering over the cockpit. The tachometer was stopped at 2500 rpms. Officers said the plane engine was apparently running as it hit the ground as both propeller blades were broken.

Coroner Edwards said he planned to ask for an autopsy.

Inflation forces hike in ski lift tickets

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Higher costs for labor, electricity and mountain equipment are the principal reasons Sun Valley ski lift tickets will likely rise in price to $15 a day.

Wally Huffman, Sun Valley resort's director of operations, said inflation and the need to gradually pay off $2.5 million worth of mountain expansions this summer will cause Sun Valley ski lift tickets to jump in price next winter.

Sun Valley resort has submitted next winter's lift rate schedule to the U.S. Forest Service and the resort is proposing to raise the price of daily lift tickets by 15 percent and the price of half day tickets by 22 percent.Sun Valley plans to charge $15 for a day ticket and $11 for a half day ticket next year.

This past winter, full-day tickets cost $13 and half-day tickets $9.

Idaho residents, who are the primary buyers of two types od discout card passes will see the daily discount ticket price rise by 38 percent and the half day discount rise by 44 percent.

The actual dollar reduction on a discout card ticket will be about the same next season as it was this year, but because daily lift rates are rising in price, the percentage increase on discount tickets is quite high.

"It's fairly simple ," Huffman said, explaining the increases." "We're just responding to inflationary costs asnd what's happening with labor costs, electricity, and equipment."

"We have been very aggressive about investing new money there (on the mountain) ... and we're going to try to generate some kind of cash flow to help amortize these investments."

"I don't like it any more than you," Huffman stated, "but it is a fact of life and we deal with it as well as we can."

The Aspen and Vail, Colorado, ski resorts also have asked the forest service for permission to charge $15 for full-day tickets

Huffman said Teton Village in Jackson, Wyoming is asking $16 for next winter's tram service to the top of the mountain.

The highest percentage increases for tickets at Sun Valley occur on the discount ski tickets avinilable at the resort.

An average 41 increase in price for the discount cards is planned by Sun Valley.

Huffman noted that discount passes to accomodate local skiers were only initiated at Sun Valley in 1974 and that for many years, skiers skiied without them.

He also said many ski areas have simply abolished local discount passes.

"In 1920, what did a Model T Ford cost?" Huffman asked, emphasizing the effects of inflation on the general economy. "I think we're in an inflationary cycle and will be for the foreseeable future. There is no sense in doing what we do just for the fun of it."

Building to be razed

HAILEY— Blaine County has agreed to tear down a communications building it erected illegally on federal land and to reconstruct the building according to federal regulations.

The Blaine County commissioners met recently with Bureau of Land Management officials and the commissioners agreed a cement building erected on Bell Mountain, about 10 miles east of Bellevue, will be torn down, according to BLM Shoshone District manager Charles Hazzler.

The concrete structure, which was to house radio and communications equipment for the Blaine County Sheriff's Department, was never approved by the BLM.

The building, which cost the county $3,577, is trespassing on BLM land and it also violates building, site and environmental specifications requested by the BLM, according to Hazzler.

The BLM district manager said the commissioners agreed to remove the structure and reconstruct a new communications building to meet BLM requirements. He said the work is expected to begin in early June when snows have melted from the top of Bell Mountain.

The new building will be located in a less conspicious site and is expected to be constructed of fiberglass. It will be covered with earth to help it blend into the surroundings, Hazzler said.

Four children hurt in bus-car mishap

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Four children were injured this morning in a crash between a Minidoka County school bus and a car.

A man suspected as being the driver of the car that rammed the bus was captured two miles southeast of the accident site, Minidoka County Sheriff Ray Jarvis said.

Minidoka Memorial Hospital Administrator Ed Richardson said four children were treated for minor injuries received in the accident, which occured two miles west of Rupert about 8 a.m. at the junction of Highway 25 and 200 West.

Richardson declined to release the names of the children, but he said only one was x-rayed to determine the extent of injuries.

Doyle Lowder, assistant superintendent of Minidoka County School District, said the four students were girls, one age 9, two age 15 and one age 18.

Bus driver Darlene Moser was not injured, Lowder added, and the rest of the children were taken to school.

The assistant superintendent said there were 30 junior high and elementary students on the bus, but he had not yet determined how many high school students were aboard.

Jarvis identified the suspect arrested as Jesus Manuel Bovadillas, 21, of Cutler, Calif. He said the suspect was on foot when he was apprehended about 9:45 a.m.

Bovadillas is being held in Minidoka County Jail on charges of leaving the scene of an accident and for not carrying insurance. Jarvis said the man probably will be arraigned before Magistrate Judge Ronald Bruce about 2 p.m. today in the Minidoka County Judicial Building.

The sheriff said deputies were still out of the office investigating the accident late this morning. He added his men also are checking to see if Bovadillas, who does not speak English, is an illegal alien.

Community pitches in for fund drive

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Hanse and Martha Ross are collecting a lot of recyclable newspapers and aluminum cans this spring and having fun while they're at it.

"It's a lot of fun," Mrs. Ross says. "We can go around and see people and do more than just sit around here and look at each other."

The Rosses are part of a growing number of Hansen residents helping to clean up their city and upgrade its facilities and services.

Since Febrauary, residents of the small Twin Falls County town have been holding town meetings to discuss growth problems. One of the top priorities has been replacement of a 1932 Howe Defender which constitutes the Hansen Fire Department.

Although the town got a $5000 federal grant to purhcase a new truck, a new fire truck costs $40,000.

Hansen residents have looked all spring for other ways to finance their new fire engine.

The Rosses and nearly every other resident of Hansen are doing everything they can think of to raise enough money for the purchase. Collecting recyclables is one prong of their fund drive.

"We've got several things going," Norma Coates, one of the city organizers, says. "We're having one event after another. Our $5,000 grant has to be used before September."

So far the newspaper and aluminum can drive have netted more than $300 for the fire truck fund, according to Connie Trevy, city clerk.

June 3 the city will sponsor a "Sell Your Loot Sale" in Kimberly. Hansen folks are asking area people to donate anything they can spare to be auctioned off at the Kimberly event.

Coates says Hansen will sponsor a Fireman's Ball after the sale to help raise more money for the fire truck fund.

Bill Ethridge, Hansen fire chief, is checking into possible antique markets to sell the old truck the city now owns, but so far he has had no luck.

Ethridge reportedly tried to sell the old pumper to Bill Harrah, who has an antique car collection in Nevada, but got no response.

"We would sell it if it would benefit us," Coates says. "So far we can only get $500 out of it."

In the meantime, the fund drive goes on.

Coates says people who want to donate old newspapers, aluminum cans or items for the June 3 sale should call 423-5158 or 423-5074. Hansen residents will pick up items donated for the sale.

Bruneau plan discussed

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Water Resources will hold a meeting tonight in Twin Falls to discuss a plan to divert Snake River water into off-stream storage for irrigating farmland on the Bruneau Plateau.

The purpose of the meeting, which begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, is to answer questions and gather input from irrigators and other interested persons.

About 90,000 acres south of Hammett and Bliss are now irrigated by pumping water during the growing season from the Snake River up several hundred feet to the Bruneau Plateau.

The director of the water resources department, Bill Allred, has proposed converting from pump irrigating to gravity flow in order to save some 150 megawatts of electricity now consumed and to increase summer flows in the river.

The plan is to divert winter flows from a point upriver on the Snake and transport the water by canal to a proposed storage reservoir for use during the irrigation season. This could allow the development of as many as 200,000 more acres of Bruneau Plateau land, Allred said.

Alternative ways for transporting the water include attempting to gain the use of the Twin Falls Canal Co. canal system or building a new canal.

The water resources department intends to ask the next session of the legislature to fund a feasibility study of the plan.

Allred has also proposed setting up a $100 million water development fund for the state to help pay for such projects.

Farmers want their story heard

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some raised potatoes, some raised wheat, and some raised cattle.

But Sunday night they gathered in Twin Falls and agreed they should also raise a little Cain in order to get their story told.

The occasion was a "Democrats for Agriculture," fund raising dinner, an event which drew 150 Magic Valley farmers, farm families, candidates and public officials.

While Sen. Frank Church drew a standing ovation for his remarks in defense of American agriculture, those present also applauded segments read from a 1928 Will Rogers speech quoting Rogers as saying the farmer needed a punch in the jaw," if he thought either party "cares a damn about him after the election."

Farmers are being criticized as the cause of high food prices, Carl Reynolds, executive director of the Western Potato Growers told the audience.

That isn't true, Reynolds said "but the farmer isn't, telling his side of the story."

Reynolds said the average consumer "spends approximately as much for the family auto as for the food bill." The American consumer spends less for food than consumers in other industrialized countries, Reynolds added. "That's why you can afford that second auto."

Reynolds said farmers should spend as much time selling their story to the consumer as they now spend selling their farm products.

Reynold's comments were seconded by Tom McClain, a member of the Idaho Potato Commission.

McClain said some American food products were priced too high for competition with foreign crops. The reason for the price wasn't the farmer, McClain said, but loading charges assessed at ports for shipping.

McClain told the gathered farmers they should work at finding "a method of equalizing those loading charges," even if through a government or industry subsidy.

Reynolds and McClain drew applause for their comments, but the crowd rose to a standing ovation for Sen. Frank Church.

"The American farmer has increased his productivity and now is the most productive part of the economy," Church said. Church added he had sponsored several measures aimed at helping Idaho and Western farmers. Those measures aimed at the following problems, Church said:

•Grazing fees. Church said his bill would tie grazing fee increases "to market prices so they can fluctuate as prices fluctuate." The proposal also calls for rehabilitation of range lands, Church said.

•Reclamation Act of 1902: Church said his bill "will be the vehicle for the bringing up to date" of the Reclamation Act. That measure, which now limits to 160 acres the amount of land which can be irrigated with water from federal reclamation projects would be modified, Church said. The acreage limit would be increased to a maximum of 1,280 acres owned and leased for each farm family.

•Gasahol. Church said he had introduced a bill which would require immediate use of "gasahol," a gasoline-alcohol mixture. Under the Church bill producers of gasoline in the United States would be required to sell gasoline with a one per cent alcohol content by 1981.

Educators oppose one percent initiative

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Education Association voted Wednesday "to actively oppose the one per cent initiative."

The initiative, if passed, would limit property taxes to one per cent of the actual market value. Before that initiative can be voted on, however, 25,964 signatures must be gathered on petitions to place the measure on the November election ballot. Approximately 10,000 signatures have been gathered to date.

The education association, in opposing the initiative, said the measure "will slash existing 1977 property tax revenues by at least $141 million." That "radical and sharp reduction in property tax revenues," the association said in a news release "will have a disastrous impact on our school, police and fire departments, emergency medical services, street and maintenance operations and other basic public services."

PUBLIC NOTICE OF INTENT TO ADOPT RULES

Notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, proposes to amend the Eligibility Manual, Docket Number 0301-7807, Title 3, Chapter 1, Sections 3121.11, 3121.13, 3121.4, 3122.2, 3181(3)(b)(i), Department of Health and Welfare Rules and Regulations, pursuant to Title 67, Chapter 52, Idaho Code.

The following is a descriptive summary of the subjects and issues involved:

Effective July 1, 1978, increases in legislative appropriations for public assistance have increased certain allowances used to determine eligibility and/or payment amount for applicants and recipients.

3121.11 Recipients in Households: Adult Category of Assistance. Proposed for amendment to increase the basic allowance for adult category applicants and recipients in households.

3121.13 Recipients in Room and Board Situation. Proposed for amendment to increase the basic allowance for adult category applicants and recipients in room and board situations.

3122.2 Housing Allowance. Proposed for amendment to increase the housing allowance for AFDC applicants and recipients based on the number in the AFDC grant.

3181.(3) Eligibility for Medical Assistance.

(b) Income limitations.

(i) Proposed for amendment to increase the Medicaid eligibility standard for single individuals in long-term care.

(ii) Proposed for amendment to increase the Medicaid eligibility standard for couples in long-term care.

For the purpose of determining if the proposed regulations will be adopted as stated above, any person or group interested in the matter may submit written comments to the undersigned on or before June 5, 1978. Unless twenty-five (25) or more interested persons, a governmental subdivision or agency, or an association having a membership of not less than twenty-five (25) interested persons make a request in writing for a general hearing on the proposed rule(s) on or before June 5, 1978, no such general hearing shall be convened.

Within the time limits specified herein, any person may review the text of the proposed rule(s) in the Office of the Custodian of the Records or in any of the Regional Administrative Offices of the Department or the offices of the Regional Attorneys General, Health and Welfare Division, located in Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston, Caldwell, Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello, and Idaho Falls. Copies of the proposed rule(s) may be made at the expense of the requesting party.

Dated this 17th Day of May, 1978.

PUBLIC NOTICE OF EMERGENCY ADOPTION OF RULES

Notice is hereby given that the Director of the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, by authority granted in Title 39, Chapter 1, Idaho Code, has adopted under emergency procedures, pursuant to Section 67-5203(b), Idaho Code, the following amendments to the Rules and Regulations of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare:

LEGAL NOTICE

Eligibility Manual, Docket Number 0301-7807, Title 3, Chapter 1, Sections 3120.41, 3120.42, 3121.4, 3121.41, 3121.42, 3140.3(7), 3140.3(8), 3140.3(7), 3180, 3180.1, 3180.2, 3180.3, 3181, 3182, 3183 and 3184 are repealed. Recent federal legislation (P.L. 94-566) amending Section 1612(b)(6) of the Social Security Act, eliminated the prohibition against vendor payments for group care. However, a second federal law (P.L. 94-565) defines State Supplementary Income payments as cash payments to individuals receiving benefits from a State. This definition was not amended to allow for vendor payments. Payment of State Supplementary Income to vendors rather than to the proper individual, as provided for in the rules amended under Docket Number 0301-7711 and hereby repealed, would result in a violation of P.L. 94-565. The penalty for such violation would be a loss to the state of federal Title XIX matching funds, projected to be $22,075,000. The result of such loss would be to deprive 10,000 needy Idahoans of necessary medical care.

3121.4 is amended to reflect the language of the rule prior to its amendment under docket Number 0301-7711, that amendment being repealed. It now sets out the maximum room and board allowance for aged, blind and disabled recipients, since there is no longer a differential in the maximum payment rate for applicants and recipients living in room and board situations.

3120.41, 3120.42, 3121.41 and 3121.42 which are now repealed, provided for a differential in room and board rate for recipients who are living in licensed shelter homes which have entered into a provider agreement with the Department of Health and Welfare or in homes offering shelter care, to less than three (3) meals, and any other room and board living situation.

3140.3(8), which had been amended effective May 1, 1978 under Docket Number 0301-7711, has been returned to its original wording to eliminate the differential in payment rate for room and board based on living situation.

3140.3(7) which is now repealed, set forth the budgeted needs to be allowed to applicants and recipients depending upon their living situation.

3140.3(7), which had been renumbered 3140.3(8), effective May 1, 1978 under Docket Number 0301-7711, has been returned to its original numbering.

3180, 3180.1, 3180.3, 3181, 3182, 3183 and 3184, which have been repealed, set forth definitions and conditions for making vendor payments of public assistance for aged, blind and disabled residents of licensed shelter homes which have entered into a provider agreement with the Department.

These rules and regulations, adopted by emergency procedures on the 1st day of May, 1978 became effective immediately upon filing in this office on the 1st day of May, 1978 and shall expire at the end of 120 days on the 29th day of August, 1978.

Dated this 11th day of May, 1978.

Stricter dog leash laws to take effect in Jerome

JEROME — Stricter leash laws in Jerome are scheduled to take effect in about six weeks.

The revised dog ordinance, which stiffens the fines for those who repeatedly allow their dogs to run loose, was given its first formal reading at last week's Jerome City Council meeting.

After two more readings, the proposal becomes city law upon adoption by the council.

The ordinance states stiffer penalties and new dog license fees are needed because a majority of Jerome dog owners are failing to license their dogs and a large number are running at large.

Here are the major changes in the rules governing the city's dog population:

• Dog license fees, which are required for all dogs older than 3 months, will increase to $10 a year from the present $7.50. But a neutered male or spayed female dog will cost its owner only $3, in an attempt by the city to encourage owners to reduce the breeding population.

• Those who permit their dogs to run loose in the city will have to pay a $10 fine for the first violation, but the penalty for the second violation within 12 months will jump to $25 and for the third and subsequent violations to a whopping $50.

• The city police and animal control officer will be given increased powers to handle dangerous or vicious dogs. The police may kill such a dog if it cannot be captured, and the dog catcher may destroy one which has bitten a person more than once. The first biting incident will mean the owner must keep the animal permanently chained, muzzled or confined.

• In addition to the fines, owners whose dogs are picked up for running loose also will pay a $3 a day fee for impoundment and notice of the capture will be posted at city hall. If a dog is picked up without a license the owner must still buy a dog license before he can reclaim the animal.

The penalties are payable to the city clerk, but if a person believes himself innocent of a citation handed out by the dog catcher or police, the case goes to magistrate court. Cases will also go to court if penalties remain unpaid.

Independent Meat wins slowpitch meet

TWIN FALLS — Independent Meat Company won five straight games Sunday to swoop out of the loser bracket and win the Newton slowpitch softball tournament.

Independent nailed it down by defeating Pepsi-Cola 9-8 in the extra session after first forcing the tournament into overtime with a 5-4 decision.

Pepsi-Cola had marched through a long Saturday and won the semi-finals against Skaggs of Burley Sunday morning to advance to the finals. Independent simply played all day.

The usually tight softball tournament schedule was made even tighter by a sudden gully-washer that washed out Friday night's seven-game schedule and forced postponement of the openers until 10 a.m. Saturday due to wet grounds.

Once it got started, however, it went full bore on all three diamonds and didn't end until after 8 p.m. Sunday.

Pepsi-Cola, which has been having a tough time winning during the regular season, came out with timely hitting and its best defense of the season. Skaggs matched that until the 17-5 decision in the championship semi-finals.

From that point on, half of the competition in every game of the tournament was provided by Independent Meat.

Independent knocked off K and D of Rupert 14-4 and then ousted Donnelley Sporting Goods-Factory Outlet Tire 8-4. Donnelley-Factory Outlet was running the same gauntlet Independent was and it was their seventh game...but it gave Independent a chance to really get its entry fee's worth.

The new champs then ousted Skaggs 17-7 with an early power display that set the tone.

Independent stayed on the power track in the first title game against Pepsi-Cola. Meyer homered in the second and Parker picked up a solo shot in the fourth and added the decisive runs with a two-run blast in the sixth.

Pepsi-Cola was held scoreless until the seventh inning when Joie Swope, Paul Clark and Larry Blackwood singled for one run and Stutzman followed with a triple to plate two more. Mike Kloos sent Stutzman in with a single before Independent got the last two outs — sandwiched around a walk — on fly balls.

In the extra game, Parker and Art Benavidez got Independent going with back-to-back homers in the first inning. Independent moved just out of reach with four runs in the fifth when Benavidez double, Meyer lived oln an error and Wilcox and Fran Florence sent the runs across with a sacrifice fly and single.

Pepsi tried to get it into overtime in the seventh by scoring two runs but again Independent got the final out with Pepsi having runners in scoring position.

Jeff Swope started the inning with a hit and Blackwood lived on an error. Two scored on Beem's hit but Independent then slammed the door.

Safe at home

REACHING home at the same time as the ball is Independent Meat's Anthony Koren in the semi-final game against K&D Plumbing of Rupert. The K&D coach complained that the runner should be out because he was hit by the ball. The umpire ruled him safe and that was the end of the discussion.

Study says girls injury rate on par with boys programs

CHICAGO (UPI) — High school girls suffer no greater injury rates than boys participating in the same interscholastic sports, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported Sunday.

Doctors James G. Garrick and Ralph K. Requa of the division of sports medicine at the University of Washington reported in the journal's current issue on their two-year study of athletic programs in four schools.

About 22 percent of the girls were injured in each season in the sports of badminton, basketball, cross-country, gymnastics, softball, swimming, tennis, track and field and volleyball.

The injury ratio for players on the schools' boys teams was 24 percent, football and wrestling excluded.

For the girls, softball led the injury list with more than 40 percent of its players suffering injuries. Gymnastics followed, with track and field placing third. Fewest injuries were in badminton, tennis and swimming.

Garrick, however, cautioned about comparing injury rates of boys and girls because the sports often are played with varying degrees of intensity.

The benefits to be gained from interscholastic competition, he points out, far exceed the risk of injury.

"Injuries occurred at a rate of one every 650 participation hours," he said. "It is difficult to imagine any activity that would not result in one injury for every 650 hours.

Jim Simons earns Memorial win

DUBLIN, Ohio (UPI) — Jim Simons, performing calmly as he had done all day, ran in a downhill 25-foot par putt on the final hole Sunday to capture the $250,000 Memorial Tournament by one shot over Bill Kratzert.

Simons, who had won only $27,000 this year, pocketed $50,000 in prize money in winning his second PGA event since joining the tour in 1972. He and Kratzert matched final rounds of 74 as the rugged Muirfield Village Golf Club course took its toll on the pros.

Simons finished the four days at 284, 4-under par, one of the highest winning totals on the tour this year.

Jack Nicklaus, who designed and owns the 7,101, par-72 course, made a brief charge for the lead on the back nine, but a double-bogey six on the 17th hole and a bogey on the last hole left him at 2-over par for the day and even par for the tourney.

Fuzzy Zoeller, who started the day at 1-over par, was one of the few pros to break par, shooting a 70 for a 287 total, good for third place.

Nicklaus, Ed Sneed and Gary Player tied for fourth at 288, four back of Simons. Sneed shot 71 Sunday while Player, who with Nicklaus was four back entering the final round, bogeyed three of the last six holes for a 74.

Morris Hatalsky, who was even par in Sunday's round, and Bob Shearer, who shot a 75, tied for fifth at 289. GU Morgan was all alone in sixth at 291, and Jerry Pate, Curtis Strange, Jay Haas, David Graham and Tom Watson tied for seventh at 292.

Kratzert, playing just ahead of Simons, missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole that would have put him 4-under and tied with Simons.

But the 28-year-old Simons, of Tequesta, Fla., drove into a right-hand fairway trap on the final hole and hooked his second shot near a large tree, about 20 yards short of the green. It appeared the Memorial would have the second playoff in its three-year history.

Simons had to pitch over a deep sand trap and his ball rolled 25 feet above the hole. With Kratzert watching from near the green, Simons stepped up and rapped the putt in for his first win since the 1977 New Orleans Open.

Hometown favorite Nicklaus appeared to have shot himself out of it when he triple-bogeyed the par-3 fourth hole, but he fought back into contention by birdieing the next two holes before disaster struck at 17.

Simons seemed unfazed by the tremendous gallery following him and defending champion Nicklaus, but their playing partner Rod Curl, who started the day just two shots behind Simons, had trouble all the way, shooting a final-round 81 for a 295 total.

The handsome, soft-spoken Simons, whose best previous finish this year was a tie for sixth at the Phoenix Open, scrambled all the way Sunday, coolly sinking par-saving putts from six to 20 feet on five of the last seven holes.

"I made the clutch putts," said Simons in analyzing his victory.

"I'm very relieved that today is over," he said. "I felt a lot of pressure this week. I hit a lot of good shots, and some on which I sort of cringed. But it was one of those weeks. When I missed, I missed in the right spots. I thought I played fairly intelligently."

Simons said he had not been able to relax all week, "especially playing with Jack (Nicklaus) today. It was rather dumb, but I worried more about Jack than I did Bill Kratzert. I really respect the man. It's hard to ignore Jack when you're playing with him, especially in Columbus."

Kratzert said, "Jim made a helluva putt on 18. It was for all the marbles, and he made it. That's part of the game."

Kratzert said his second shot on 18 is within 10 feet of the hole was "probably my best shot of the day. I thought I had made the putt when it was three feet from the cup."

KU athletic director resigns

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — With a report that claims he was not knowingly involved in the controversy that put Kansas State University on Big 8 Conference probation, Athletic Director John Jermier Sunday announced his resignation.

Jermier said the report enables him to comply with a request from university president Duane Acker Saturday to leave the director's post. Acker said Sunday that although the report on grants-in-aid brought Jermier's position "to a head," he also cited mismanagement of the department as key reasons for requesting Jermier's resignation.

"I have been under considerable pressure" Jermier said in a statement released Sunday. "But I was unwilling to offer my resignation while the internal investigation was under way because my reputation may have been put under a cloud."

The university awarded 43 new grants this past year Acker said, while Big Eight and NCAA regulations restrict teams to 30.

Acker said management problems in the department that he said he first noticed about six months ago figured significantly in the resignation request.

No chance

DIVING for a loose ball like hungry hawks are Sonics' John Johnson and Bullet's Bob Dandridge. The Sonics, playing on their home court, pulled out a come from behind win in the first game of the NBA Championship series 106-103.

Sonics bushwhack Bullets

SEATTLE (UPI) — "I wouldn't say we surprised them, I think we shocked them," said Seattle Supersonic forward John Johnson. "I think everyone in the coliseum was shocked, except us. They couldn't believe we could come back from that far down, that late in the game."

Johnson was speaking after his team outscored the Washington Bullets by 23 points over the last 14:26 to grab the first victory in the NBA championship series.

"We always believe," he said. "We've come back like this numerous times."

Sonic Coach Lenny Wilkens, looking poised but admitting he was emotionally drained after the 106-102 thriller, said he had never lost faith in his club.

"I thought it was a super comeback. We stopped giving up the quick foul and I think that did it, plus great team defense," Wilkens said. "We got the momentum and all of a sudden they were under pressure. They had to make their shot."

The coach said he stressed poise and the avoidance of bad fouls as his team fought back from a 19-point deficit with 2:26 left in the third quarter.

"John Johnson and Freddie (Brown) took over (on offense) in the last two minutes and the whole team played great defense," Wilkens said.

"I was trying to get my teammates to move the ball around and get into the flow of the game," Brown said of the fourth-quarter stretch drive in which he scored 14 points. "We were a little too anxious at the beginning. We struggled through the whole first half."

Paul Silas, veteran forward who held Washington's Elvin Hayes to only two points in the final period while grabbing 10 second-half rebounds, said defense turned the trick.

"They could do almost anything they wanted to do, inside and outside, in the first half," he said. "When we came out and presured them, it was a different story."

Silas said he is sure the Bullets have "a whole lot more respect for us. Now, they know we're for real."

"No one in the league performs better under pressure than Freddie does," said Sonic center Marvin Webster.

Asked how he believes the Bullets must feel after blowing a 19-point lead, Brown laughed, "I hope they're really down and I hope they stay down."

Cauthen looks to Preakness

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — What can an 18-year-old jockey do for an encore after he wins $6 million in purses and breaks all sorts of records in his first year of riding?

Why, win the Triple Crown, of course.

Steve Cauthen, who turned in yet another flawless ride in guiding Affirmed to victory in the second jewel of the Triple Crown in Saturday's $188,700 Preakness at Pimlico, said he is optimistic about making the gleaming chestnut colt the second Triple Crown winner in two years, joining Seattle Slew as possibly the first back-to-back winners of the three major races in history.

"I hope I win," he said. "I want it pretty bad. Alydar is a great horse and there's not a big difference between them. They're two great horses and I expect another great race in the Belmont."

The Belmont is the last of the three races, a grueling 1½-mile test set for June 10 in New York.

Last year Cauthen won $6,151,750 in purses, topping the old record by more than $1 million, and won 487 races, a one-year total topped only twice previously. He received Eclipse Awards (racing's Oscars) for outstanding jockey, outstanding apprentice rider and a special award of merit for contributions to the sport.

"He (Alydar) ran a good race," said Cauthen, "better than in the Derby."

¼ Affirmed, who has now won 13 of his 15 starts for earnings of $1,023,227, ships to New York Monday morning, where he will join Alydar, who left Pimlico 10 a.m. Sunday.

Prudhomme tops Firebird field

BOISE — Don "the snake" Prudhomme lived up to his advanced billing with a resounding victory in the Funny Car Division Sunday as he set both ends of a Firebird Funny Car records for the track.

Prudhomme turned the quartermile strip at Firebird Raceway outside of Boise in 6.23 seconds at a top speed of 237.37 miles per hour.

He defeated college teacher Twig Zeigler of Pendleton, Ore. in the finals for the championship. Zeigler recorded no time in the final run as his Mustang nearly flipped over at mid-track and he had to pull his parachute.

Earlier, Zeigler had run in the 220 mph range with a time of 6.40 seconds.

In the top fuel dragster competition, Rob Bruins of Seattle, Wash took the honors with the winning run of 6.15 seconds and a top speed of 231.27 mph. His final round victim was Graham Light of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. Light turned the quarter in 6.21 seconds for a top speed of 219 mph.

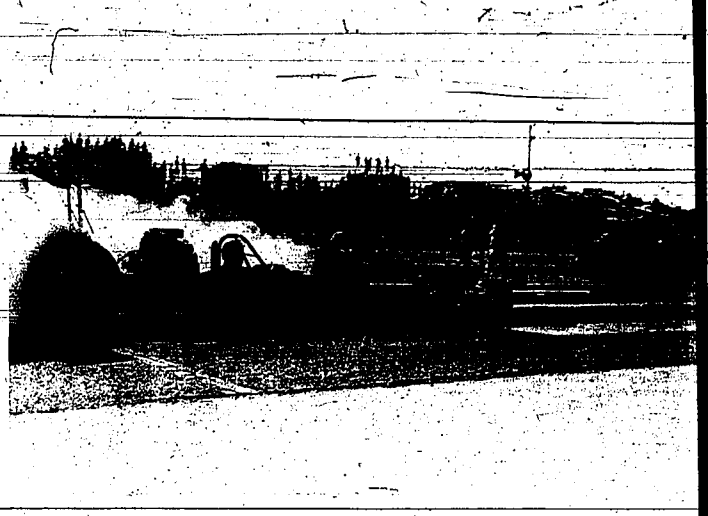

In the pro stock division, Brad Yuill of Reno, Nev. driving a Chev-Monza valued at $38,000 won with a time of 9.11 seconds and a top speed of 153 mph.

Runner-up in that division was Marty Maltaise of Aberdeen, Wash. Maltaise who was also driving a Monza, hit 147 through the quarter with a time of 9.31 seconds.

Magic Valley racers also entered the competition. Burley racer Ron Baker made it to the quarterfinals with a time of 7.44 seconds and a speed of 190 mph in his supercharged alcohol dragster.

In the modified category, Dave Austin of Twin Falls drove his 57 Chevy E/Modified production entry to a time of 11.40 seconds and a speed of 119.96 mph.

Over 7,000 fans watched the finals Sunday as some 400 racers ran their machines through the quarter mile track.

BURNING the wheels of their top fuel dragster are Rob Bruins, foreground, and Graham Light. Bruins beat Light, the Canadian Champion, through the quarter with a top speed of 231.27 miles per hour.

Problems keep Foyt from pole bid

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Defending champion A. J. Foyt, who failed in his bid for the pole position, Sunday became the 200 mph qualifier with the fastest 33-car lineup assured in the history of the Indianapolis 500-mile Speedway race.

Foyt qualified for his record 21st consecutive Indianapolis 500 at an average speed of 200.122, the second-fastest in the 62-year history of the famous gasoline derby.

Under normal circumstances, the heavy-footed Texan would have qualified for a front-row starting spot in Sunday's million dollar chase, but he was deprived of that Saturday by a mechanical problem for which he took the blame.

Only Tom Sneva, who captured the pole spot Saturday for the second straight year at a record clip of 202.156, was faster than Foyt, who tied with Danny Ongais for the second-best speed in the starting lineup.

Foyt took the blame for what he called an "adjustment error" Saturday in his turbocharger wastegate, which controls the power delivered by his eight-cylinder engine.

"Well, we're in the race," he said after his 10-mile sprint. "We didn't extend ourselves. It was bit gusty and considering the way the wind was blowing, I'm satisfied."

Seventeen cars were qualified on the final day of the trials, and 37 for the weekend. The first weekend of qualifications was washed out.

Three cars were "bumped" by faster machines in the final minutes of the trials and another eliminated itself for lack of speed.

The starting field averaged 192.584 mph, compared with the old record of 192.329 five years ago.

Pancho Carter, who like Foyt failed to qualify Saturday because of mechanical problems, was Sunday's second-fastest qualifier at 196.829, and and Salt Walther was third fastest at 193.226.

Canada's Cliff Hucul, the only foreigner in the field and the final qualifier, averaged 187.803 in eliminating the car put into the race by New Zealand's Graham McRae.

Three rookies made the lineup Sunday, making a total of five for this year's race. Two of them, Larry Rice and Joe Saldana, were involved in the "bumping" process. Saldana qualified at 190.809, eliminating a car driven by veteran Harkey. Rice, at 187.393, eliminated Al Loquasto.

The other rookies in the race are Rick Mears, Tom Bagley, and Phil Threshie, who qualified Sunday at 187.520.

Other successful qualifiers Sunday were George Snider, 192.627; Mike Mosley, 188.719; Jim McElreath, 188.058; Jerry Karl, 187.549; Gary Battenhausen, 187.324; and Sneva' brother Jerry, last year's rookie of the year, who became the slowest in the field at 187.266.

Larry Cannon averaged 180 on his third attempt, but failed to make the lineup.

Half a dozen other unsuccessful attempts were made Sunday to get into the race, including two by veteran Billy Vukovich, whose father, Bill, won back to back races in 1953 and 1954 but who was killed in 1955's race.

A boxer with lipstick?

DETROIT (UPI) — Peaches Orr is probably one of the few boxers who wears pink lipstick during a bout.

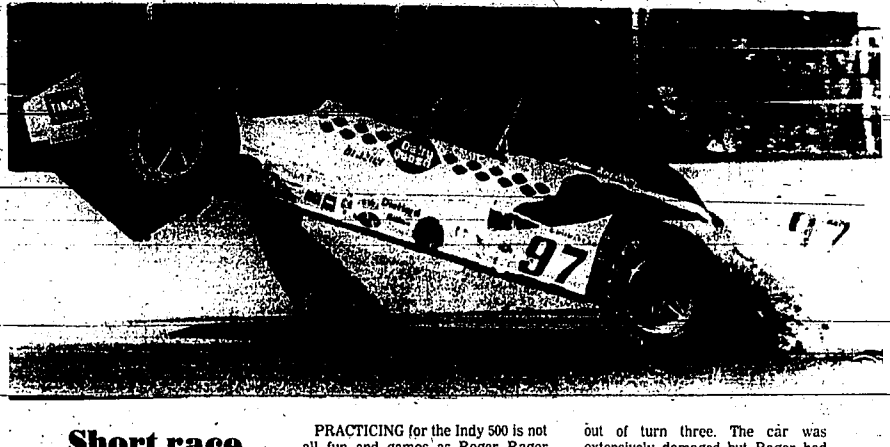

But then Peaches is also one of the few girl boxers around.

Her real name is Cora. She stands 5-feet-5, weighs 145 pounds and sincerely wants to make boxing a career.

"My mother doesn't want me to be a boxer, but that's my goal," the 16-year-old high school junior said. "I want to go to New York and be a professional boxer."

Peaches and her sparring partner, Katie Graves, 25, drew a substantial crowd of wide-eyed spectators at a sparring match Sunday set up for Downtown Detroit Days.

Graves, a 5-foot-2, 137-pound lightweight who has been boxing since she was 13, said she and Peaches are the only women boxers in Detroit.

PRACTICING for the Indy 500 is not all fun and games as Roger Rager proves as his car hits the wall coming out of turn three. The car was extensively damaged but Rager had only an injured index finger.

Mad driver tries to stop Indy 500 qualifying

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Veteran race driver and car owner Jim Hurtubise, irate that officials wouldn't let his car run, tried to block qualifications for the Indianapolis 500 Sunday and was ordered out of all restricted areas.

The action announced late Sunday by Chief Steward Tom Binford cited numerous regulations Hurtubise was said to have broken, and said officials were imposing "exclusion as authorized" for "your repeated refusal to comply with reasonable orders of the officials."

The order signed by Binford, referee Art Meyers and steward Donald Garner, told Hurtubise, "You are not permitted access to any restricted area — including the garage area, the pits and the track — until 24 hours after the conclusion of the 1978 Indianapolis 500-mile race."

Hurtubise, who has competed in the Speedway classic 10 times and is a former track record holder, became angry because the roadster he entered and planned to drive was not certified for qualifications.

Hurtubise, who has not made the race since 1974, planted himself on the hood of a car later qualified by Bob Harkey, but agreed to vacate that spot after a discussion with Binford.

Minutes later, however, he had to be restrained by safety patrol guards as Harkey warmed up for his qualifying run. Hurtubise jumped over the wall and ran onto the track in an effort to stop the qualifying attempt.

Hurtubise, 45, was chased down by guards and removed from the track in the custody of Indiana State Police.

Binford said Hurtubise's car is now considered obsolete for this race and was not issued a final inspection sticker because it is not considered "race worthy — safe at speeds that can be expected during qualifications or the race."

Binford added that although no official times are kept in practice, it "did not exceed 175 miles per hour, which is only as fast as the second phase of the rookie test."

That speed was more than 12 mph slower than the slowest car to make the 33-car field for Sunday's race.

Binford said the car Hurtubise entered and planned to drive was one of four not given final safety certifications.

Woman burned at '74 race trying to stop fear of fire

WINGATE, Ind. (UPI) — A young woman burned seriously five years ago at the start of the Indianapolis 500 says her philosophy is to "make each day better than the one before."

Sue Ann Rankin, now 20 and a junior at Indiana State University, was injured when Salt Walther's car careened into the wall, spewing fuel over a section of box seats in which the girl was sitting with friends.

"Since the crash, I feel as though I've been given a second chance to live," she said. "And I'm determined to make each day better than the one before. Even though my skin may not have the texture it once had, I have what's most important, I'm alive."

Miss Rankin said she had hoped to attend the race this year, but couldn't find tickets. She's hoping for trip to Indianapolis next May.

"After the crash I had nightmares about fire involving my family and friends. And I still have them occasionally. In time, my fears will lessen and lessen," she explained. "I think attending the '79 race would help me overcome my fears of fire and feelings about the race."

She spent two months in hospitals following the crash. The first part of the recovery was at Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis in a room next to Walther's.

Miss Rankin, who suffered third degree burns over 44 percent of her body, underwent three operations in 11 days.

Reds, Padres split doubleheader

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Rick Auerbach came home on a two-out bases-loaded wild pitch in the fifth inning by John D'Acquisto Sunday to give the Cincinnati Reds a 1-0 victory over San Diego in the second game of a doubleheader after the Padres capitalized on three errors and a pinch-hit, two-run double by George Hendrick to win the opener, 7-2.

In the opener, Bob Shirley stopped the hard-hitting Reds on seven hits in a route-going performance.

Pirates 7, Expos 0

MONTREAL (UPI) — Rennie Stennett hit his first career grand slam and Omar Moreno added a solo blast Sunday to power the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-0 rout of the Montreal Expos behind the combined six-hit pitching of John Candelaria and Kent Tekulve.

It was the second shutout in a row for the Pirates over Montreal and the loss was the fourth straight for the Expos, dropping them below the .500 level for the first time since their 10th game of the season.

Tigers, Sox split

DETROIT (UPI) — Reserve catcher Bob Montgomery drove in four runs with his first four hits of the year Sunday to lead the Boston Red Sox to a 9-3 victory after the Detroit Tigers won the opener, 2-1, behind Milt Wilcox' six-hit, 11-strikeout pitching.

Luis Tiant, starting for the first time since pulling a hamstring muscle May 8, scattered eight hits and struck out five in raising his record to 2-0, Boston pulled to within .016 of the first-place Tigers with the split before 52,368 fans at Tiger Stadium.

In the opener, Jason Thompson's 11th home run of the season leading off the sixth inning broke a 1-1 tie and handed Boston's Bill Lee his first loss of the year after six victories. Wilcox' 11 strikeouts were a career high and the victory raised his record to 3-1. Jim Rice's single accounted for the only Boston run and gave Rice 41 RBI for the year, tops in the majors.

Lynn and Manager Don Zimmer were both ejected from the first game for arguing a called third strike in the eighth inning while Tiger skipper Ralph Houk was booted from the second game for disputing an out call at home plate with the bases loaded in the seventh.

DETERMINED to score is California Angel runner Ronnie Jackson but umpire Larry McCoy holding a bat seemed to overcome the determined runner. Actually, a perfect throw from left field nailed Jackson at the plate.

Twins 3, Royals 2

Cooler and windy with showers

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert area:

Cooler and windy with scattered showers and possible thundershowers this evening. Low temperatures near 40. Partial clearing and continued cool with only very minor shower activity Tuesday. High temperatures 55 to 60.

Synopsis:

A vigorous upper air disturbance is dominating the Idaho weather and will slowly give way to high pressure and a clearing trend about mid-week. In the meantime, temperatures will average about 10 degrees below the seasonal normals with highs mostly in the 60s and lows in the 30s and lower 40s.

There is a chance of scattered light frost early Wednesday morning. More about that tomorrow.

The air mass is moist and unstable so that we shall have considerable cloudiness during the daytimes with a chance of showers or thundershowers this evening and again Tuesday evening.

The extended outlook for the period Wednesday through Friday is for a warming trend and more stable air mass and more sunshine, so that conditions will again be generally favorable for most outside work or play.

Windy conditions will prevail through tonight and Tuesday, diminishing to more comfortable levels Tuesday night and Wednesday.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, lower Wood River Valley:

Cooler and windy with scattered showers and possible thundershowers this evening. Low temperatures near 40. Partial clearing and continued cool with only very minor shower activity Tuesday. High temperatures 55 to 60.

Scarecrow sentinel vanishes from farm

BOSTON (UPI) — They have become an endangered species — a part of our heritage that over the years has slowly disappeared from the farms and gardens along the backroads of New England's towns and villages.

They are victims of modern times, a voiceless [illegible] and once stood sentinel over [illegible] and vegetable patch, today only a handful remain. No, each spring, fewer and fewer scarecrows can be seen.

They are a controversial character — praised by some, laughed at by others, but always humble in appearance as they stand uncomfortably perched in the middle of a field under a hot sun, doing a chore no ordinary farmhand would welcome.

"I can't deny that they are a vanishing breed. I can remember that it wasn't long ago, when it seemed that just about every other field in town had a scarecrow. I guess it was just part of the way things used to be around here in the old days," said Mrs. Hollis Magoon of Fremont, N.H.

The Magoon farm, off Rte. 111, which passes through a small town of less than 1,000 inhabitants, is one of the few farms in the area which still "employs" a scarecrow to stand guard over the crops.

"I really can't understand why they are disappearing," says Irving Potter, a farmer in Berwick, Maine. "I've always used one and I can say truthfully they've always done the job for me. Sure, sometimes you get birds like the red-wing blackbird, who won't pay as much attention to the scarecrows. But hell, they don't always [illegible] pay attention to me.

"I think one of the reasons people have gotten away from scarecrows is that they have found that most birds are smarter than you think and it won't take them long to get used to the scarecrow," said Professor Robert Young of the [illegible] Massachusetts College of Food and [illegible]. "How you scare a bird [illegible] and the type of crop. There [illegible] used. For example, [illegible] would be frightened by explosives while others would practically sit on a cannon before they'd move. So sometimes you really can't tell what will work."

But Thomas Lane, who works a small field across from his uncle's farm on Rte. 4 in Billerica, Mass., says the scarecrow is as good a method as any.

"When those crows go after the crop, you've got to do whatever has to be done. We tried using chemicals and soaking the seeds in oil, but we still couldn't keep the birds away. You might not believe it, but we haven't had any problems since the scarecrow took over."

Like so much American folklore, the scarecrow's history is intertwined with fact and legend.

The practice was common in England and other European countries before the time of the colonists. In fact, the scarecrow is referred to in the pages of William Shakespeare's Henry the IV, which dates back sometime around the 16th century.

The actual origin of the scarecrow is believed to have come down through the ages from the time of early Greek mythology, when the scarecrow was worshipped as the God of the field and protector of crops.

Marijuana dye tested

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Officials will soon conduct tests on a dye to determine whether it could be used to warn American pot smokers that the marijuana they smoke is contaminated with the herbicide paraquat.

The chief executive officer of the attorney general's office, Fernando Baeza, said that Rhodamani B, a non-toxic commercial dye, would be sprayed on marijuana fields in Oaxaca state along with paraquat.

The dye, when applied in high concentration, appears as red dots or streaks on marijuana leaves.

Baeza said it has yet to be determined how much Mexican marijuana exported to the United States is contaminated with the herbicide.

Rural areas lose doctors to city

DENVER (UPI) — Rural communities competing with cities for doctors often lose because rustic comforts pale next to fat salaries, access to recent scientific discoveries and more freedom, a University of New Mexico Medical School professor said.

Martin Kantrowitz, a former rural [illegible] who advises hundreds of rustic [illegible] about [illegible] community practice [illegible] is researching the factors leading to [illegible] dissatisfaction with rural practice, but we aren't sure why," he said at an American Medical Association conference on rural health.

Kantrowitz has formulated a list of 16 variables which he believes contribute to satisfaction in a rural practice.

"Some are amenable to change and others are not. But if a doc is less than happy in rural practice, he or she should look at these elements and decide what is changeable, if they want to make the changes or leave," he said.

First on the list is compensation, not because money is always the major issue, but because "It's better to get it out in the open," he said. The issue takes in salary, vacations and fringe benefits.

"A lot of docs go into rural practice for altruistic reasons and say they will be happy if there is enough money to get along on. Well, the honeymoon ends and while the doctor may not like to admit it, money can be a problem."

A bargaining session with the community can solve the money issue, he said, but he warned against use of federal grants for remuneration because the funds tend to dry up after a few years.

The next three components — colleagues, consultation on cases and continuing medical education — are benefits physicians derive from urban practice and are sorely missed by practioners starting out alone in rural areas.

"Even if a doctor comes from a small town, he has been in a big city for [illegible] years. You get all kinds of expectations, professional and personal, from that and it poses adaption problems," said Kantrowitz.

The remedy Kantrowitz recommends is "getting plugged into a medical system" such as a university which offers traveling seminars, a telephone consultation service and regular communication with specialists.

Competence and confidence are two related factors which also can be cured by "plugging in." He said the two tend to be vague feelings which dissipate when the isolated physician has professional contact with other doctors.

Kantrowitz said dissatisfaction with clinic facilities takes in the variables of equipment, space and staff. The ninth component, compatible staff, ties in as well.

"Some doctors can get along with anyone and see a rundown facility as earthy and positive. But if it's a problem, facilities are relatively inexpensive to fix compared to the cost of finding another doctor," he said.

Coverage, which involves care of patients while the physician is away, was described as a "biggie" by Kantrowitz because of the distance between doctors in rural areas and the need for practitioners to "go fishing when they need to."

"If the doctor feels he cannot get away because of the coverage problem, he will eventually fall apart. Coverage has to be set up whether it involves physician extenders or the community doing without for a week," he said.

The component of clinical spectrum works both ways, he said. Some doctors dislike performing the full range of specialties from surgery to dermatology while others find the frequency of trauma and delivery cases limiting.

Common goals, communication and community encompass the physician's rapport with the people served and spill over into the next to last element — captivation with the practice, said Kantrowitz.

Peach growers have tough time

DIX, Ill. (UPI) — The vagaries of recent Illinois winters and springs show clearly that the state's peach growers must have a gambling streak in them.

"The odds are probably worse than in Las Vegas," said Prentiss "Bud" Hawkins, who has 50 acres in peaches, 100 acres in apples and three acres in strawberries south of this Jefferson County village.

"One thing is for sure: you can't rely entirely on peaches," said Hawkins, who has 25 varieties among his 4,000 peach trees.

The trees are loaded with blossoms this spring and Hawkins is looking forward to his first full peach crop since 1975.

"We've had only one real crop in the last six years but it looks real good this year," said Hawkins, who started growing peaches again in 1967. His father was a peach grower but quit in 1940.

The Hawkins peach trees reached full bloom about April 18 and their dazzling display of pink was expected to be extended by colder weather.

Just the right amount of cold about now would save Hawkins some money by [illegible] some of the fruit. Otherwise, it will require thinning by hand.

But Hawkins said he would rather pay the cost of having that done than trust nature to do the job without killing the whole crop.

Dan McGuire, a fifth generation peach grower who has 100 acres of peaches near Makanda south of Carbondale, feels the same way.

"The good Lord can thin peaches but most of the time he doesn't do too good a job," said McGuire.

Hawkins said if the temperature should dip to 25 degrees at this stage, he could lose as much as 90 percent of his crop.

"You have to do some thinning and the peaches and without any thinning the weight of the fruit would tear the trees to [illegible]."

So when the peaches reach the size of a walnut, workers equipped with poles and pieces of rubber hose will rid the trees of some of their burden.

Hawkins said when John Gage was a leading state horticulturist in the 1920s and 1930s Jefferson and Marion counties became the top peach-growing area in the state.

"He lived near Texico and he got all his neighbors interested in growing peaches. Now, I know of only about three commercial growers in this area."

Hawkins sells his peach orchard's entire output from a roadside stand along Illinois 37 south of town.

"I have some customers who drive down from Chicago, although I probably sell most of the peaches to people who come from central Illinois."

McGuire, who has 100 acres of peaches and 150 acres of apples, said, "I must have peaches in my blood."

State track meets add new stories and memories for hotstove league

TWIN FALLS — When the final shot had been fired and another Idaho state track and field year completed Saturday at Boise, there were the usual number of impressions, memories, etc., left behind.

One of the most is that Brian Ochsner of Filer might someday find out how good he is. He ran very well at the first and at the end of the season and simply picked up points in between.

But he also proved that he reacts to stimulation when that luckless challenger of Friday night vowed to Brian's face that he would beat him in the two-mile. That urged Brian into a 9:39 effort. It was the second lap of the mile run Saturday that stopped his apparent bid to get under 4:20.

A week ago in district he ran splits of 60, 2:04, 3:14 and then the 4:21.1. Saturday he again was at 60 on the first lap but his halfmile time was 2:12. He was, it appeared, surprised by that as he headed into the third lap and picked up the pace. He brought it back to 3:14 going into the final but the truth about having more at the end if you spend more on time early, seemed true. That and the heat — plus the lack of competition — moved his final time up to 70.

Then there is the unique method by which Twin Falls sophomore Mitch Mingo didn't pole vault competitively in Boise also he was one of four who had cleared 13-6 in the field.

Mingo was warming up Friday when his fibreglass pole came up with a weird flex, snapped back and caught the youngster in the face, breaking his nose. So while the pole vault title and placement points were being decided, the luckless Mingo was at a hospital being told that nothing could be done for a few days until the swelling went down.

There also was the satisfying impressions that one took home about the competitiveness (guts and heart) that one still can see. No like one used to, but once in a while to let it be known some still possess it.

One of these is Valley's Brian Human, who wound up the A-3 state intermediate champion. Not that Human wasn't considered a strong favorite. But most hurlers are bulk like greyhounds while Human is built like the thing he is — or at least does best — play fullback and linebacker in football. He has accepted a scholarship to University of Nevada, Las Vegas in that sport.

So while the greyhounds were challenging, Human just worked harder and refused to let them pass. Now the Valley staff knows about Human's heart and put him on the end of the mile relay. No happy reports there as Valley went unplaced, but Human picked up ground.

Then there is the enigma of Twin Falls' Dave Skinner. He might be the best mile relay anchor man in the state. But he isn't an open quartermiler...and don't bother to ask why because neither Dave nor Coach Jerry Kleinkopf has an answer.

When Coach Kleinkopf summed up the A-1 meet it definitely appeared that Twin Falls was about 12 points shy. Harkening back to the Boise relays, it was recalled that Skinner had taken the mile relay baton about five yards behind Borah's Aitchison and won the event. In the SIC, Aitchison ran second in the open quarter. So putting those facts together, the Bruins decided on switching Skinner to the open quarter when he hopefully could beat Aitchison. This would have a two-fold purpose. It would pick up the placement points for Twin Falls plus subtract points from Borah. It would put the meet into a situation when a Borah foul up or a Twin Falls pleasant surprise could vault the Bruins ahead of the Lions.

But Skinner didn't get into the finals of the open. Aitchison ran third in it. Then Skinner came back to again beat Aitchison on the anchor of the mile relay.

The Twin Falls girls also greeted the coaching staff with a surprise after the meet ended, although the girls had blown all competition away. Junior Liz Dolezal pulled a hip muscle in the 440-yard relay but didn't tell anyone but her teammates, who in turn didn't tell the coaches. Liz ran on the medley and the mile relay teams, too.

"We thought that Liz was running very poorly but she wasn't limping or favoring anything and didn't say anything," Kleinkopf says.

Sister Diana Dolezal pulled the medley baton from seventh to second on her anchor leg. In the mile relay, Twin Falls again was seventh after Liz made the lap as best she could. Brenda Falash and Susan Sweet, however, pulled that victory out.

When informed of the injury to Liz, Coach Kleinkopf was upset on two counts — first possible further injury to Dolezal and second, because there were people available to take her spot and the extra pain on her part wasn't necessary.

But Falash had the answer for the coach when he asked the inevitable question about why he wasn't informed.

"We just told her to bring us the baton and we'd do the rest," Falash said — and judging from results, she knew what she was talking about.

There also is the Wendy Schwarz of Valley story who probably had her best shot at a gold medal in the long jump. But when the junior sustained a stone bruise on her first effort (17-2) she agreed that for the good of the team and her hopes for placement points in other events, the broadjump should be bagged. However, the 17-2 held up for third.

Then there is the inevitable "personal disaster" of dropping a baton in a relay. It happened to Jerome in the medley and luckless sophomore Jane Ireton simply collapsed into a wad of body and tears and had to be helped from the track. Still, Jerome won the team thing and Ireton by know will know that the sun always rises.

And the other lasting impression is that Twin Falls' reign of terror in track is done for a couple-three years now. The Bruins will be respectable but the boys no longer will be the consistent state challenger and favorite.

Not so the girls. The dynasty survives.

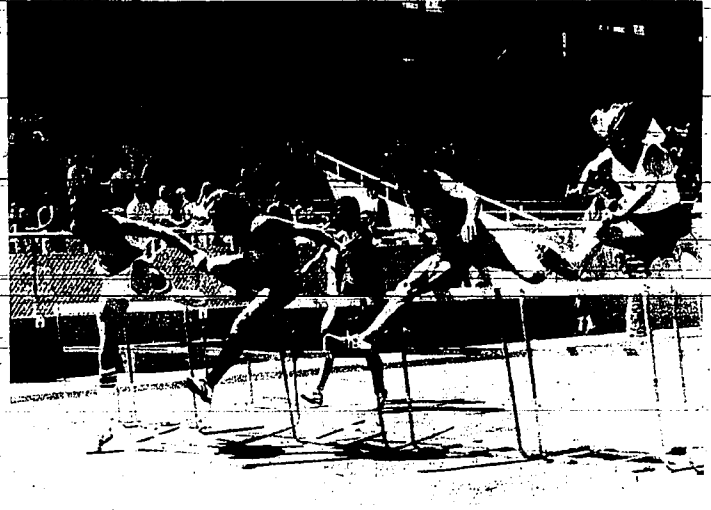

RECORD EFFORT by Patty Kasel set the state mark for a while until Delilah Cavin of Mountain Home won it at 42-2¼. Kasel was second at 40-10½ and also runner-up in the discus.

Victory smile

SMILING Susan Sweet of Twin Falls takes the tape to win the mile relay and cap the Bruins girls' rout of the A-1 state finals Saturday.

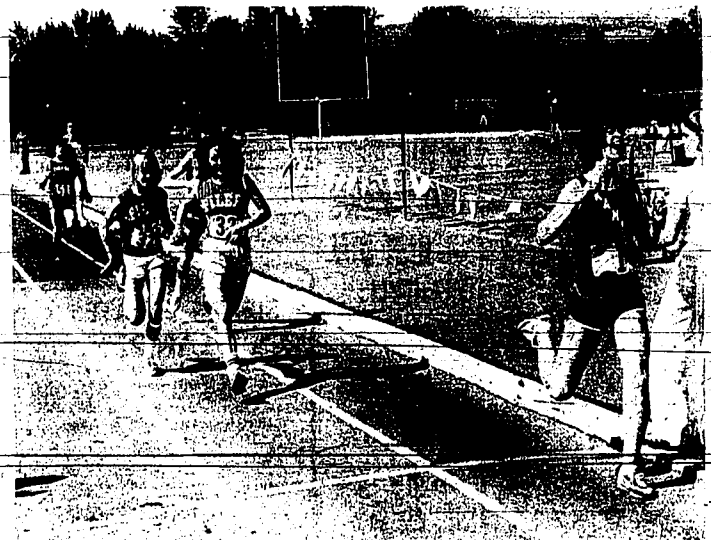

TIGHTEST race of the A-3 state finals came in the high hurdles where Dietrich's Leland Towne, left, leading here caught the last hurdle with his trail leg, lost his balance and finished fourth. Butte's Bill Burch won it, Shoshone's Jason Webb was second and Rick Farnsworth, Meadows Valley, was third.

Heading for home

VALLEY'S Brian Human takes the last barrier and heads for home to win the state A-3 intermediate hurdles.

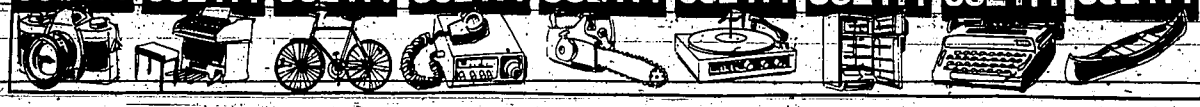

FILER HALFMILERS Beth Rupprecht (327) and Tammy Jarolimek (328) lost the battle but won the war when they finished two-three and earned 14 points for their Wildcats. Kamiah's Donna Parsells celebrates the win.

Padding the margin

HAPPY Terry Clayton brings the Buhl 440-yard baton home first in the A-2 state finals Saturday. Clayton didn't have this good in the opens but Buhl won the team crown.

WINNEBAGO
The name that means the most in motor homes.

23 ft. Winnebago BRAVE®

The new stylish exterior is only the beginning of this fashionable 1978 Winnebago Brave®. It's two feet longer and several inches wider than last year's model. And Winnebago has put that added space to good use. With a list of standard features you'd expect to find only in luxury motor homes. But the best part is the price! You'll be astonished how low it really is!

The New Minnie Winnie Series

Feature for feature, dollar for dollar, the Minnie Winnie is the best value in mini motor homes. With the Minnie Winnie, you get the total, self-contained, live-in comforts that you find in every Winnebago.

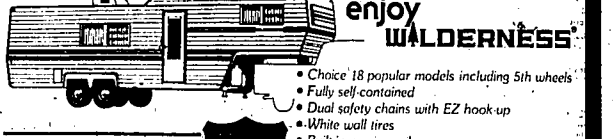

You'll find that the size of the Minnie Winnies makes them versatile and easy to drive. They are also one of the easiest to afford.
